Vaccine's Beginning It must have been at a date almost coincident with Jesty's and Jenner's experiments with vaccine that Lady Mary Wortley Montagu brought to England the Turkish method of inoculation for smallpox, writes a correspondent to a London paper. The inoculation was not with vaccine, but with the poison of smallpox itself, as stated on her epitaph in Lichfield cathedral, in which Henrietta Inge, daughter of Sir John Wrottesley, wishes to express her gratitude to Lady Mary for the benefit she herself received from this "alleviating art which softens the virulence of this malignant disease." Lady Mary like Jesty, first tried the experiment of inoculation on her own family. The epitaph is dated 1789. For a time, state. Happy to Oblige Two Englishmen in andia spent their leave shooting bear. Their first day they had no luck until sundown, when one got a chance of a shot and killed. It transpired, however, the victim was an old native woman, and no bear. As they were discussing the matter the headman of the village appeared. They pointed out how sorry they were such an accident had happened, and offered to make a reparation. The headman suggested the sum of 200 rupees-or just over $60, Three years later they went to the same district again shooting bear. They arrived at the bungalow at night, and once again the same headman appeared. He made a simple request. "If you sahibs have another

Joe Griffin and his wife had doubts about letting the children go to school that morning. Every sign enough, about two o'clock, it broke. A terrible storm.

Joe was terribly worried and so was his wife. Then he thought of the telephone. He called Jim Stokes, who lives just down the road from the school and asked him to watch for the children.

Twenty minutes later Jim called back. He had the children in his kitcher, safe and warm. "I'm certainly thankful we've got a telephone," Joe said. "We couldn't do without
