

The Milton Music Teachers' Association held its seventh annual festival last week to large audiences at two locations. Here, scholarship winner Kerri Can de Valk gets right into her song of "Let's hear it for the boy". More than 1200 young Milton musicians participated in the festival.

Anthony Rosiello was also a scholarship winner in violin.

Alexandra Knoepfli's piano work won her a $25 scholarship.

Hundreds compete musically in seventh annual festival

More than 1,200 music students sang and played instruments while competing for a host of scholarships in the seventh annual Milton Music Teachers' Association Music Festival last week.

The festival took place from Monday to Sunday at St. Paul's United Church and Halton Centennial Manor. Two grand concerts were held Sunday at the manor with scholarship winners in the junior and senior playing concerts.

Here are the winners and their scholarships. The scholarships were given to those "who show the most promise of future development musically and aren't necessarily awarded to winners of first, second or third places", said the committee.
