

Art of bird carving thrives in Campbellville

By LISA TALLYN

The tools of the trade include a block of wood, carving knives, a high-speed grinder, a flex burner and a box of bandages.

Bird Carvers, artists who take chunks of wood and transform them into wooden replicas of birds, are accustomed to the sight of blood. Finger knicks, from the slip of a knife, are one of the hazards of the job.

Three Burlington bird carvers, John Murray, Russel Black and Dennis Sinclair, were at the Campbellville Lumberyard and Tea Room this past weekend, demonstrating their skill and showcasing some of the birds they have carved over the years.

Mr. Murray was looking for a hobby three years ago when he stumbled upon bird carving. He bought the proper equipment, some basswood, took courses from other carvers, and has been carving ever since.

Among his collection of birds are a cardinal, a loon, and a chickadee. He is currently working on a hooded merganser.

Bird Carving is a very precise and slow paced art. It took Mr. Murray more than 60 hours to complete the carving of the merganser. He says he will likely spend another 20 hours painting the bird with watered-down acrylic paint.

Russel Black, a Burlington Bird Carver, was in Campbellville on Sunday demonstrating the skill required for the art. He is shown here putting the finishing touches on one of his works. He and two other carvers will be at the Lumberyard and Tea Room in Campbellville for the next three weekends.

Opti Club is turning debt corner

By MIKE BOYLE
Champion Reporter

The Optimist Club is well on its way from rescuing the Optimist Centre from a debt of $51,000.

The three-year debt represents the amount of property taxes owed by the Centre to the Town of Milton.

Paul Page, president of the Optimist Club, said the club's board of directors have made the debt a priority item for this year and, should everything go to plan, it'll be wiped clean before next summer.

Although the centre is in debt, Mr. Page is quick to point out the difference between the club and the centre. He said the club has met all its financial obligations continuing to donate up to $20,000 each year to youth projects. He said the centre, which is wholly operated by the club, has run at a financial disadvantage for the past few years.

Among the major plans for rescuing the centre are last weekend's Wing Ding, building a clubhouse at Brian Best Park, and better management of the centre.

The last part, better management of the centre, already has allowed it to turn a small profit, which is much improved over operating in the red as it did for the past three years.

Last month, the club took the first step to alleviating the debt when it offered to build the clubhouse for the Town. All Town officials agreed it would be a benefit to both parties to build the $40,000 building.

Club members are to donate their time. The Town will then pay the club about $15,000 for its labour which it will turn back to the Town.

Up to 40 members are expected to take part in building the clubhouse. Optimist Club member Gord Hull, a former contractor, will supervise the project. The Town's architects are preparing drawings of the project, which is to be similar to the new clubhouse at Campbellville's ball park. Mr. Page said construction will begin shortly thereafter.

Mr. Page said estimates are for the Wing Ding to raise upward to $15,000 with all the money to be used to pay off the debt.

In addition, Mr. Page said a concentrated effort has increased the bookings at the centre's banquet hall from 65 per cent six months ago to 85 per cent now. That percentage should approach capacity soon, he added.

The Centre also has about 5,000 square feet of space in its basement which, Mr. Page said, the club hopes to lease to a tenant. Should a successful tenant be found, another $20,000 could be gained for a year's rent.
