

More advertabenches approved despite protests

By ROB KELLY
When it came to the town's controversial deal concerning park benches, councillor Bruce Attenborough's emotions were as volatile as the arrangement itself. Milton council has had an on-again, off-again deal with Advertabench for months now. It calls on the town to sprinkle the urban area with 21 new park benches, the backs of which form miniature advertising billboards. Already the company has 25 such benches in town. Monday night council finally approved the additional 21 benches, after the same idea was stalled a few weeks ago by politicians, then re-instated at a transit committee meeting last week. It didn't sit well with Mr. Attenborough, who has been a consistent opponent of what he labelled "visual pollution."

The Ward 3 councillor dug in his heels again Monday. "I don't want to get in a confrontation. I just don't like the benches. I wish them (Advertabench) all the best of luck in some other town, like North Rectum, Saskatchewan." The councillor's opinion was that the bench concept didn't dovetail with such projects as the elegant restoration of Milton's town hall.

He called the renovated hall "one of the finest buildings in all Halton. A beautiful building. I don't think we would put an advertisement on the wall. Yet we'll put one on a bench in front of the building." "I'm concerned with the proliferation of advertising," Ward 3 councillor Barry Lee added. "When do we stop? As far as benches are concerned, I think there are more appropriate places for advertising."

"We advertise on town buses," Ward 2 councillor Mary Long noted. It's giving revenue to the town. I don't see any problem with that."

Councillor Art Melanson agreed. "It's merely an extension of the current transit system."

Roy Downs, a marketing consultant representing Advertabench, pointed out that if the town installed the benches, it would probably cost taxpayers $25,000. The company picks up that tab, and gives the benches to Milton at the end of a five-year contract. Advertabench recoups its cash through ad revenue.

Mr. Downs said the company was making significant adjustments in order to meet Milton halfway. The blue benches currently dotted around town will be exchanged for wood grain models because councillors have requested it, he pointed out.

Advertabench will also permit free town advertising on any unsold bench spaces in 1989, Mr. Downs added.

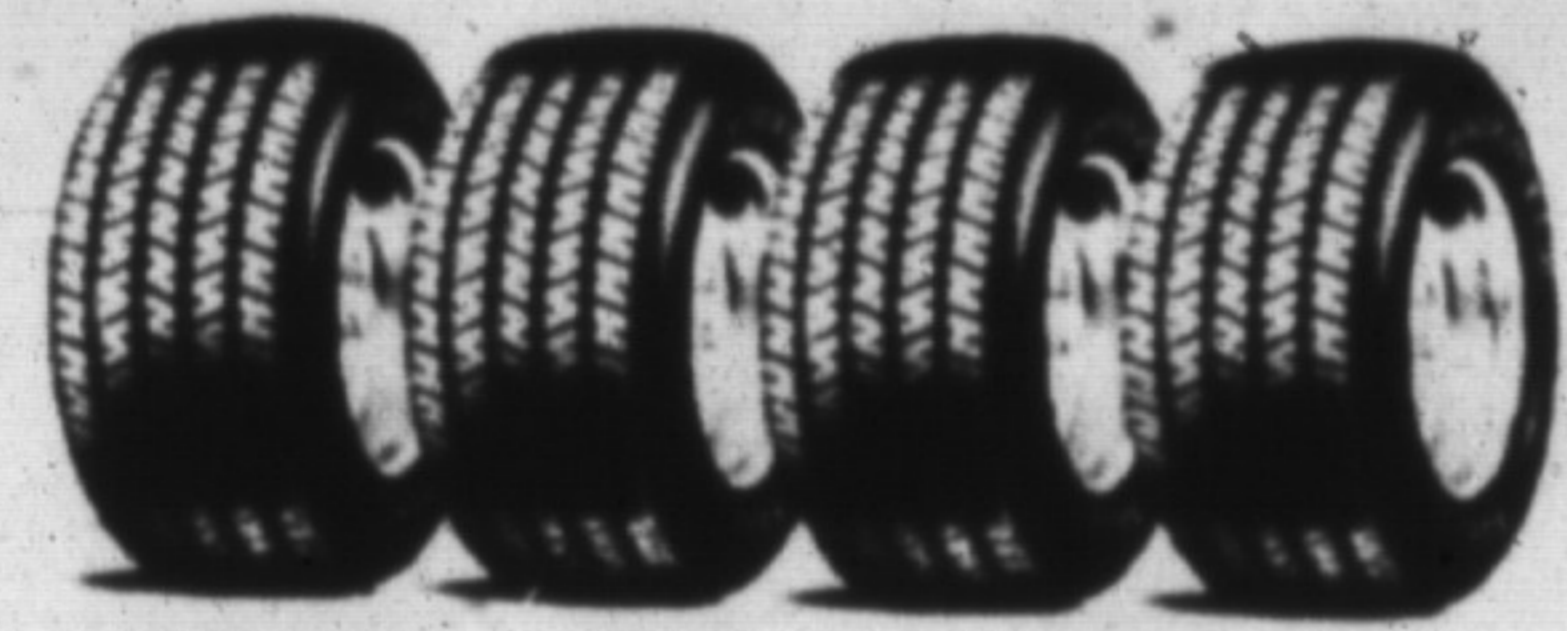

It was not enough to convince Mr. Attenborough. "I request a recorded vote, Your Worship," the councillor said to Mayor Gord Krantz. "When the time comes, I won't say I told you so."

In the recorded vote the three rural councillors, Bill Johnson, Mr. Lee and Mr. Attenborough, voted against the idea. The following councillors supported the proposal: Mr. Krantz, Brian Penman, Mrs. Long, Colin Best, Mr. Melanson, Rick Day.
