With the help of instructor Angela Bzovey, 10-year-old Cathy of Mississauga demonstrates a new system called the IBM Speechviewer which allows students at E.C. Drury School for the Hearing Impaired to visualize speech. The $20,000 computer system was donated to the school by the Ronald McDonald Children's Charities of Canada. A celebration was held Wednesday.

Deaf students can now see what they say

Students at E.C. Drury School for the Hearing Impaired can now visualize speech with the help of a computer system donated by Ronald McDonald Children's Charities of Canada (RMCC).

A $20,000 RMCC grant purchased three IBM Speech-Viewer packages for the school which will use the system to help motivate young children in their speech development efforts.

The computer, with its colour game-like graphics and visual display of sound, enables students to better understand what sound is in a more meaningful and fun way.

Based on 10 years of research, SpeechViewer helps develop basic awareness of selected dimensions of speech such as pitch, loudness, timing and the presence or absence of voicing.

E.C. Drury School for the Hearing Impaired staff and students as well as representatives from McDonald's celebrated their new system at the school Wednesday.

Milton Mayor Gord Krantz attended a special lunch, sponsored by McDonald's, and viewed a demonstration of the equipment.

RMCC is a national, non-profit foundation with a simple objective — to help children in need. It is committed to assisting organizations and individuals whose programs are community-oriented and focus on improving the quality of life for children and families of children with cancer and life-threatening or chronic illnesses.
