

She's nobody's valentine

Dear Abby: Another St. Valentine's Day has come and gone without flowers, candy or any kind of a valentine from my husband.

I'm 25 and he is 26, and we've been married for three years. I'd have been thrilled if he had brought me a flower—or even handed me a valentine—but he ignored the day completely.

Abby, the newspapers were filled with ads for gifts, and the store windows were decorated with hearts and flowers to remind people of that special day for lovers.

He's a super guy, hardworking and decent, so maybe I shouldn't complain. But it sure would have felt great to have been remembered on St. Valentine's Day. Any ideas?

Nobody's Valentine

Dear Nobody's: So, another Valentine's Day has come and gone. You were forgotten, and now you're hurt.

Well, don't let it happen again. A week before St. Valentine's Day, leave a note on his pillow, "Only six more days before St. Valentine's Day—start shopping for a card."

The following day, tape a note on the bathroom mirror, "Only five more days... a single rose would be nice." The next day, stick an artificial flower in his shower with another reminder. I think you get the idea.

Some men need more reminding than others, so don't sit silently with your fingers crossed, hoping he'll remember. Some good-humoured "reminding" can save you the pain of being forgotten. And he may even appreciate it.

Dear Abby: You recently reminded your readers about International Forgiveness Week, which is a wonderful idea. However, it is nothing new. In the Jewish religion, there has been a "forgiveness fortnight" for at least 2,000 years.

During the 10 days between Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur, those of the Jewish faith are commanded to ask forgiveness from those whom they may have offended or wronged during the year. In Judaism, God cannot forgive the sins a person has committed against another unless the sinner has asked that person for forgiveness. If the injured party rejects the apology three times, the wrongdoer is then released from his or her obligation to ask forgiveness.

Isn't this a beautiful tradition, and a good way to begin a new year?

Dear Krisman: It is indeed. This year, the 10 days to ask forgiveness are between Sept. 20 and Sept. 29.

Confidential to "Hates War" in Anchorage Alaska

No one said it better than another military man:

"Every gun that is made, every warship launched, every rocket fired, signifies a theft from those who hunger and are not fed, those who are cold and are not clothed. The world in arms is not spending money alone. It is spending the sweat of its laborers, the genius of its scientists, the hopes of its children. This is not a way of life at all in any true sense. Under the cloud of war, it is humanity hanging on a cross of iron."
