A PUBLIC SERVICE OF HAR BLOCK

Q. I am a handicapped person who is unable to use public transportation. Because of this, I have to use my specially equipped car all the time. This is quite expensive. May I deduct the cost of gasoline as a medical expense?

A. No. However, a gasoline tax rebate is available to handicapped persons who must use their car because they are unable to use public transportation. As a handicapped person, you have the choice of claiming either 15 cents per 100 km or 1.5 cents per litre as a rebate. You may make a claim for any gasoline purchased in the last two years.

Q. I have three children from a previous marriage. Since December, 1989 I have been living in a common-law relationship. Will this affect my Child Tax Credit claim in any way even though my common-law spouse is not the father of my children?

A. It may. Your common-law spouse is entitled to claim an equivalent-to-married amount in respect of one of your children. If he does so, his net income for the entire year must be aggregated with yours when calculating the amount of Child Tax Credit available to you.
