group's struggle with sickness and poverty.
Another project SHARE already supports is a 65-acre work farm run by a Catholic organization for street kids just outside of Porto Alegre. "We've assisted them with irrigation equipment, crops, cattle and cultivating equipment."
He said it's the Catholic brother's habit two or three times a week to travel to the city and visit with the street kids. On one trip, Mr. Beaty accompanied him and he recalled a conversation, on a cool, rainy night, with a kid camping out in a doorway who said he had left home because his large family was cramped in a small one-room apartment and continually fighting:

"How do you get by?"
"I shine shoes."
"How much do you make?"
"Two or three dollars a day — I didn't make anything today because it was raining."
"Do you steal?"

"Sometimes."
The Catholic brother also made attempts to visit the families of his clients to offer assistance. One resident was so ashamed of his family's living conditions that he wouldn't reveal where he lived for about three months.
When he finally provided the location, Mr. Beaty accompanied the Catholic priest there.
"I think there was a total of about 10 people, including the mother and father, in a room. Living conditions were appalling."

As an early spring snowstorm rattles the office, Mr. Beaty is already planning his next trip — to look over requests for agriculture assistance from the Central American country of Belize.
"I've gained so much out of this," he says. "It broadens your outlook on life. It gives you so much more to think about. It's a real education."
For more information, or to make a donation, phone the Beaty's at 878-9352.
