Memories are remade of this

Paul Simon, a 39-year-old German ex-soldier from World War I, leans against the door of his father's blacksmith shop in the village of Schabbach. "I'm off for a beer," he announces, and promptly disappears for nearly two decades, leaving his wife and children behind.

Simon is answering the "Call of Faraway Places," the title of the first episode of the 11-part series Heimat, which encores on TV Ontario Mondays at 9:00 p.m. beginning May 28.

The longest film ever made — 15 hours, 24 minutes — Heimat, directed by West German Edgar Reitz, chronicles six decades of German life in a small Rhineland village, spanning the years 1919-1982. It covers the action through the lives of a remarkable woman named Maria (played by Marita Breuer) and her family, who rise from poverty to considerable wealth.
