

Champion scoops national advertising, editorial awards

The Champion has won six awards in the 1990 Canadian Community Newspaper Association's Better Newspapers Competition. Competing against other Canadian newspapers with similar circulation, The Champion won first in the best advertising idea category for an issue celebrating the newspaper's 130th anniversary.

Other honours include three third-place awards for general excellence in best all round newspaper, best front page and best editorial page categories.

The newspaper also won third place for a special issue which looked to the future of Milton in 2000 and third place for best photo essay. Champion publisher Ian Oliver said winning the awards is a result of the "high standards we aim for. We pride ourselves with creativity and originality."

But all that's really important, he added, is that The Champion is popular among Miltonians.

"The awards don't mean anything unless we're being enjoyed by our readers."
