PRO DRIVING TIPS

NUMBER 4 PASSING TRUCKS

Barry Shubert, Director of SASP (Safety) Inc., has driven 3.2 million km and has 30 years of accident-free driving.

Pay close attention to truck turn signals and never pass on the right or squeeze in beside a truck to turn right at an intersection.

Turning a large truck to the right is a tricky job. Sometimes I have to move my vehicle to the left before turning right to avoid running the trailer onto the curb.

Before passing a truck on the highway check the traffic front and rear. Pull out to the left so the truck driver can see you in his mirror. Indicate that you are going to pass (a professional trucker will keep to the right to make it easier).

When you see the way is clear be decisive and make your pass as quickly and safely as possible. Don't cut in, or slow down after passing. I have to shift through as many as 15 gears to reach my highway speed, and my truck takes longer to stop than your car.

Never pass a truck on the right or squeeze in at an intersection.

Be aware that large trucks can cause turbulence.

When you move into the passing lane, be aware that large trucks can cause turbulence. This is most noticeable when you pass the gap between the cab and trailer and immediately after you pass the truck.
