

'Tis the season for safe cycling

Most North Americans sometimes think of bicycles as rather expensive toys. Unlike Europeans, we do not consider them to be road vehicles. Consequently, we launch our children from trikes and training wheels onto our streets with little more than the warning to be careful and to look both ways. With the onset of spring and warm weather, now is the time to consider a few preliminary steps you should take to make biking safer and more fun. A split second of inattention can have tragic results. In fact more than 8,000 Canadians wind up in hospital each year as a result of bicycle mishaps. More than 100 die.

The size of the bike affects balance and ability to reach the steering and braking controls and pedals. You should be able to reach the ground comfortably with the ball of your foot while sitting upright on the seat.

Parents should supervise the selection of a bicycle for a child and periodically inspect the bike to see that it is in good working order.
