PRO DRIVING TIPS

NUMBER 13 REGULAR MAINTENANCE

Ken Hughes, Scarborough, of Steeles Canada Ltd. has driven 1.8 million km and has 12 years of accident-free driving.

Regular maintenance and inspection of trucks is required by law. In fact truck drivers are frequently stopped for roadside inspections, and when the vehicle passes the test, receives a dated decal which has to be attached to the windshield. In addition, Ministry of Transportation officers regularly conduct on-site compliance audits of safety and maintenance programs at trucking company terminals.

Regular care of your car will save you dollars and, more important, may save your life.

Take time to read the driver manual which comes with your car. If you have any questions talk with your dealer.

Have your car serviced regularly. Dirty oil damages the engine. Dirty air filters or misfiring spark plugs can reduce your km/litre by 10 per cent. A slow choke can increase gas consumption by 30 per cent.

Don't wait until you have a flat. Check the air pressure of your tires regularly, and pay attention to the information in your manual about winter and summer pressures.

Check the depth of the tread on your tires at regular intervals. Lack of tread, particularly in slippery conditions, can be fatal for you and yours.

Make sure your brakes are always in good working condition and your wheels properly aligned to prevent uneven tire wear and steering difficulties.

Have your car washed regularly, particularly in the winter. Getting rid of dirt and salt will extend its life and maybe yours.

Trucks must be inspected regularly.

Regular tire checks are important.
