'Bear' necessities

Plenty of bears are necessary if Halton Centennial Manor's annual bazaar is to live up to its name. The 'Beary' Merry Christmas Bazaar is slated for this Saturday at the home for the aged, running from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Irene Hesketh (left) and Josephine Barr are among the residents whose crafts, including toy bears, will be sold that day.

meeting to establish a riding association.

"It was standing room only," recounted Ms Bucher, who attended. "It was packed. Far more people showed up than organizers anticipated."

In Oakville-Milton, there are already 30-40 paid up Reform Party members.

Ms Bucher developed a strong interest in the party simply from what she heard through friends and the media — so she joined the Calgary organization through the mail. She described herself as having been a card-carrying Progressive Conservative who had voted PC all her life — but "no more."

"The bulk of the membership is coming from the PC party," said Ms Bucher.

"It (the Reform Party) is appealing to their sense of betrayal."

"I just get mad at the PCs," she explained. "They're just not acting like the PC party. There's no distinction between them and the Liberals. What the Reform Party stands for appeals to me."

Ms Bucher said the volunteers now working in Oakville-Milton feel the same way.

"They're very enthusiastic, very angry at Brian (Prime Minister Mulroney) and very angry at the system," she explained. Their goal right now is to compile a full slate of candidates across Canada for the next federal election.

Reform Party policy planks include a "Triple-E" Senate, the holding of referendums on major issues, entrenchment of property rights in the constitution and the limitation of compulsory bilingualism to "key" federal institutions.

Ms Bucher suggested anyone interested in learning more about what the Reform Party stands for might consider attending a presentation by its vice-chairman, Gordon Shaw, on Tuesday, Nov. 20 at 7:30 p.m. at Mohawk College in Hamilton.

The guest speaker at the Oakville meeting next Wednesday (Nov. 21) to establish a riding association will be Craig Armit, party regional organizer for the Golden Horseshoe area (which includes Milton).

That meeting will begin at 7 p.m. Anyone wanting more information may contact Ms Bucher at 827-8889.

Surprise! Police crash trespassers' house party

A Milton businessman had a lot of cleaning up to do after about 100 teenagers converged on a vacant house he owned Saturday night for what Halton Regional Police describe as a "monster party."

Called by a concerned citizen, police crashed the party just after 10 p.m., charging nine people with liquor and trespassing violations. "The party organizer is still under investigation," said Sgt. Frank Phillips.

The teens were between the ages of 15 and 18. Damage, estimated "conservatively" at $1,200, included numerous tire tracks on the sod, broken window and light fixtures and a smashed wall. As well, shattered beer bottles littered the property.

Eternal antifreeze

Antifreeze isn't going down the drain any more at Goodyear Certified Auto Centre. It's being recycled.

For the past year, the local service centre has been pumping used antifreeze through a Wynn Mark X antifreeze recycling unit. Antifreeze is filtered and rejuvenated with chemicals and then used again. This process can be repeated over and over.

Some antifreeze can't be recycled — about 10 per cent. It's usually found in older radiators and contains high levels of sediment. Tom Pollard, owner of Goodyear Auto Centre, says there have been no problems with the effectiveness of the recycled antifreeze.

"Eventually it will be law that antifreeze has to be recycled. You won't be allowed to dump it down the sewer any more," he suggests.

The process entails draining the antifreeze into a holding tank where it is filtered and regenerated with the addition of chemicals.

Mr. Pollard says it takes up to an hour to complete the recycling and to pressure check the cooling system and examine belts and hoses.

The recycled antifreeze costs the same as new fluid, however the savings are reflected in what doesn't go down the drain.

Tree for charity

A business that thrives on special occasions is attempting to make Christmas more special for the abused women and their children who spend the holiday season at Halton Women's Place.

Hallmark Cards and Gifts at Milton Mall is responsible for a "mitten" tree outside the store. Shoppers are invited to decorate the tree with donated mittens and gloves and to place gifts of food under it.

Those who contribute will get more than a good feeling in their hearts, they'll get a chance to win a plush white bear.

Store owners Paul and Marylou Phelan hope an open house at the card shop this Saturday will bring out plenty of charitable tree decorators.

A draw for a handmade Hallmark wreath, a Christmas music promotion and giveaways will be featured Nov. 17. The tree will be in front of the store until the end of November.
