Space ball

Some people will go to any lengths — and heights — to get a jump on windsurfing season. Lisa Hutchinson flips for the sport in this zero gravity machine that's been installed at the Kelso reservoir shore. It will not be available once the season begins however, so only those who want to brave the cold weather will be able to take a spin. This summer it will be used to train astronauts at the Burlington airport.

Super mall coming to town

Milton will likely be the destination of cross-border shoppers — municipal borders that is, when its shopping mall grows to 20 times its original size.

"There's nowhere to go but up," said new owner of Milton Mall, Nadar Ghermezian. The Ghermezians, of West Edmonton Mall fame, have had their eye on the Toronto area for several years. Milton was selected despite a lack of services.

They plan to overcome the lack of sewage and water capacity in town by not installing washrooms for the public in the mall. Staff washrooms will be available but employees of the mega-mall will be encouraged to "go before they arrive at work." The same holds true for shoppers.

The number of restaurants in the new "vertical" mall will also be limited to reduce water consumption.

The mall will feature a replica of the Mill Pond where submarine rides will be available. Old tires and a couple of garbage cans and picnic tables will be placed at the bottom of the pond to make it more realistic. Water to fill the pond will be shipped from Lake Ontario.

The Ghermezians say they may help finance the recently approved "big pipe" from the lake to sweeten the pot and speed up local planning approvals.
