Man killed crossing tracks

An inquest won't be held because CP Rail wasn't negligent in the accident, but a youth awareness program warning local students about the dangers of railway tracks will be conducted by Halton police in Milton schools, said Detective Sergeant Mike Eacrett.

The program will also focus on teenage drinking since alcohol was a factor in the two deaths on the tracks this year, he said.

Kirk Wiens, 19, of Randall Crescent was killed April 6 after being hit by a train while walking with a friend on tracks near Court Street North, the same tracks where Geoffrey Vanderholt died in 1990. The pair had just finished splitting a 24 case of beer at Rotary Park.

A 16-year-old Markham boy attending Trillium School on Ontario Street was hit by a train while walking along the tracks west of Fourth Line May 11. He was struck on the right arm, but suffered minor injuries.

In April, a Hamilton man was seriously hurt when his truck collided with a train on tracks near No.1 Sideroad and Tremaine Road, just north of Burlington.

Eight years ago, six teenagers were killed at a Derry Road railway crossing.
