

Volunteer army needed for community day

An army of volunteers is being organized to do good deeds on Community Volunteer Day, May 1, 1993.

A planning committee is currently being assembled and the first meeting is Tuesday, Sept. 29 from 7 to 9 p.m. at Hugh Foster Hall. The work plan will be outlined at the gathering and subcommittees will be formed to deal with specific tasks.

The day is being sponsored and organized by the Volunteer Coordinators Association of Halton and the Milton Good Neighbours Committee, a community group whose mandate is to encourage neighbourly acts.

Teams of volunteers including families, will be recruited from the community, schools, churches, businesses and non-profit organizations and groups to spend part of May 1 doing work in the community.

Their tasks could range from taking down storm windows for someone who is unable to; painting an elderly person's apartment; and cleaning around the Mill Pond. The event will conclude with an evening barbecue and party at Victoria Park.

The aims of the day are to foster community spirit and to get a lot of work done as well as to promote community involvement among people who may not now be involved, according to organizers.
