Everybody talks about the weather. Now you can do something about it.

1989 was one of the warmest years on record and global temperatures continue to rise. But instead of just talking about this environmental crisis, you can actually do something about it.

Join other Canadians across the country in planting trees. You'll be shading your community and reducing heat-trapping CO<sub>2</sub> build-up in the earth's atmosphere.

For more information on how you can help, write Global ReLeaf, Friends of the Earth, 251 Laurier Avenue West, Dept. Pine, Ottawa, ON K1P 5J6.
