Humpty Dumpty — abridged

Once upon a time, there was an ambitious Milton homeowner who decided spring cleanup this year would include cleaning the eavestrough on their two storey home. Unfortunately he fell off the ladder and broke his hip, requiring surgery and two months of recuperation and physiotherapy. He was not "covered" for workers' compensation for an accident at home and so he would have had no income to pay the mortgage, the groceries, the family bills, etc. Fortunately, though, he had had the foresight to take out disability insurance which paid his expenses while he was laid up. So this fairy tale did not end grim-ly.

If this had been you, would you have been protected?

At Donaldson Bourgon, we hear this type of tale frequently.

Disability insurance should be considered essential where your income is essential to supporting yourself or your family. It is one of the many elements of financial planning that we can advise you about ...
