Milton OPP cop is drummed out of the force

A Milton OPP constable, who stood by while two men sexually assaulted a woman, has lost his job.

Devon Williams, 27, a six-year member of the OPP, was dismissed last week for discreditable conduct under the Police Services Act.

He was found guilty of watching while the men sexually assaulted the woman in her Toronto apartment after a party in October, 1991. Following the assault, the officer fled the scene.

Constable Williams also gave misleading statements to police during the investigation and the trial of the two men. Both were convicted of sexual assault.

"What Constable Williams did or allowed to happen on that night is inexcusable and what he has done since that night flies in the face of what is demanded of each and every police officer in the country," said OPP adjudicator Superintendent Robert Fitches in the decision.

"Devon Williams has demonstrated that he lacks a deep and abiding understanding of the oath of office that he swore to. I cannot in good faith convince myself that he will ever really understand the level of honesty and honour demanded by this organization."

Police say woman impaired after Martin Street mishap

A Guelph woman was allegedly impaired when her southbound car collided with another vehicle on Martin Street early Sunday.

The driver of a 1989 Ford LTD smashed into a vehicle and then fled the scene at about 2:30 a.m., Halton Regional Police say.

A short distance away, a woman was arrested and charged with impaired driving, driving with over the legal limit of alcohol in her system and failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

POLICE BLOTTER

No one was injured.

Trailer stolen

A trailer was stolen from a transport company's compound on Harrop Drive Saturday.

The Freuhauf trailer bore Manitoba licence plate SN1 477 and contained household appliances, police say. It went missing sometime during the night.

Charges laid

Police have charged three Hamilton-area men in connection with break-ins to a trailer at Consumers Distributing on Steeles Avenue in March.

Five stereos of the 16 stolen from the trailer March 30 have been recovered, says Detective Sergeant Ron Welsh.

Charged with break, enter and theft are three men, one aged 28 of Stoney Creek, one 37 of Hamilton and the other 21 of Winona.

Gas bar break-in

Thieves made off with a small amount of cash and lottery tickets in a break-in at the K&B Gas Bar on Hornby Road early April 28.

The culprits broke a door lock in the 2 a.m. heist. Police are investigating.
