Trustees of the Halton Board of Education voted recently to send their "groundbreaking" equity policy to the Ontario Human Rights Commission for input and feedback before approving it.

The document, which was presented to trustees by superintendent of policy and planning Rae Stoness in May of this year, was deferred after a motion by Burlington Trustee Lynda Schreiber suggested the board take advantage of this "free consultative service."

Bone marrow donors wanted

The Canadian Red Cross Society's Unrelated Bone Marrow Donor Registry will hold a mass testing clinic Sunday afternoon (Aug. 14) at the Royal Canadian Legion Hall, Branch 272, in Cambridge.

Potential bone marrow donors must be aged 17-50, in good health and able to show identification.

Earlier this summer a Cambridge resident who works in Milton was appealing to his co-workers and the community to join the registry in hopes of finding a donor match for the young daughter of a family friend in Cambridge, who will die without a bone marrow transplant.

The clinic runs 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. at the legion hall at 26 Schofield Street, Cambridge. For information call Donor Centre Co-ordinator Nazeli Seferian at (905) 522-6885.
