The latest foray into the burger wars was launched by McDonald's Restaurants across North America yesterday (Thursday). McDonald's crew member Chris Laframboise holds the contender, which features a large meat patty, a fresh leaf of lettuce and slice of tomato. Dave Cropper, local operations manager, gives the burger the thumbs up. The burger is the first launched simultaneously in all North American markets since the Quarter Pounder, 20 years ago. McDonald's recently discontinued the McLean burger, which featured less fat and was aimed at the more health conscious of the burger eating public.
