Halton votes for reorganization

• from HALTON on page 7

Mr. Scholtens has been a proponent of a single municipality concept for the whole of Halton Region. "I believe the amalgamation process will continue into the future," he said, accusing his colleagues of acting like small town politicians. "I believe today's debate is the first step towards the amalgamation of the region. I'd like the province to take charge and use Halton as a pilot project for a large single-tier (one government) municipality."

Don Taylor, director of the municipal boundary branch of the Ministry of Municipal Affairs, was on hand for most of the debate. He said he was impressed that a consensus emerged on such a sensitive issue. He refused to say whether it would be adopted by the province. He did say policy announcements could be expected within a few weeks.

"The minister is saying municipalities have no choice in downsizing, given fiscal responsibilities," Mr. Taylor said. "However, the process should be locally initiated and driven."

After the meeting Milton Mayor Gord Krantz said he was not disappointed with the outcome, although he favoured a 6-6-3-3 distribution.

He added a reorganization of councils will now likely take place at the local level.

"It's a prelude to how government will evolve," he said. "It's all on the table: Agencies, boards, commissions, school boards, and other special purpose bodies."
