The Victoria Day weekend is here and that means that we all have some decisions to make. Go to the cottage or go camping?

Take the highway or take the back roads? Pack the warm jacket or pack some shorts? Long weekends don't come around very often, so you'll have to make all the right choices if you want to have a good time. Driving to the cottage, boating on the lake and drinks in the shade make for a potentially dangerous combination, especially this weekend. Deciding whether or not you or your driver are sober enough to drive could save not only the weekend but your life.

Now before you brush this off like it's another one of those public service announcements, consider some of the statistics.

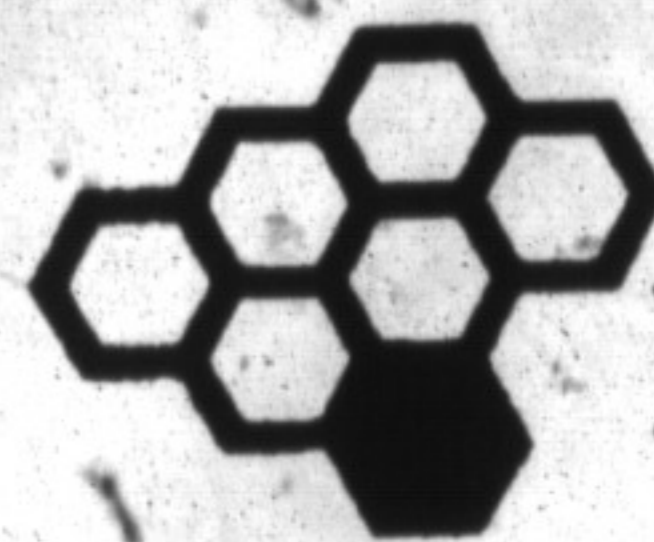

Nearly 50 per cent of all fatally injured drivers have been drinking. Of the drivers who whiz past you on a weekend evening, one out of every eight is legally impaired. Every seven minutes, an alcohol related car crash takes place across Canada. Each year
