

Coffee break

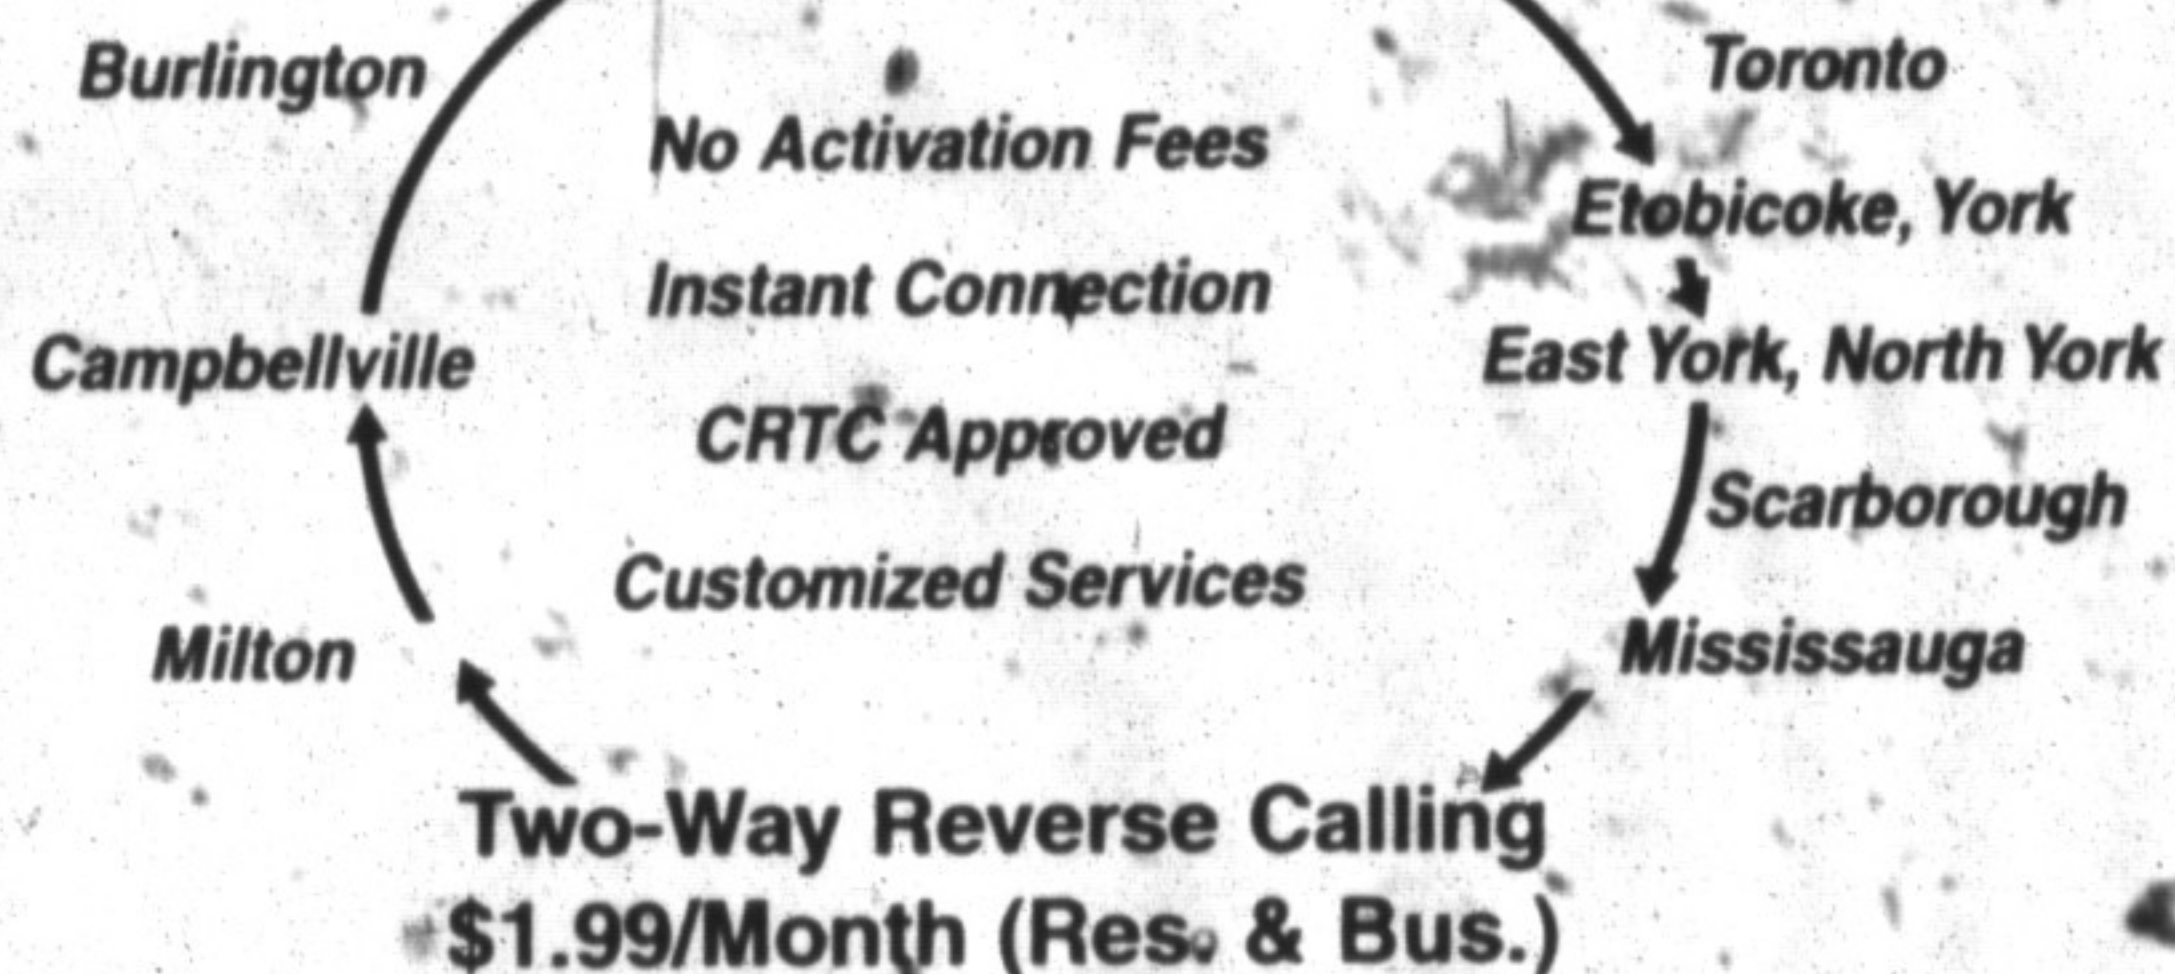

Local celebrities helped send kids to camp by volunteering their time at Tim Hortons last week. On May 15, Tim Hortons outlets across Canada donated the proceeds of coffee sales to the cause. Here, local Tim Hortons owner Diego Sdao chatted with Mayor Gord Krantz and Father Mark Curtis during a short break.

Science and tech funding boost

Fifty-one employment training opportunities for science and engineering students will be created in the Halton area in a new summer job program announced recently by Oakville-Milton MP Bonnie Brown.

"Students, companies and community organizations are working together to create work term positions related to science and engineering, giving employers and students the opportunity to establish a relationship and consider future fulltime employment," says the program's creator, Bob Loree, a teacher at Oakville Trafalgar High School.

Every dollar provided by the federal government to the program is matched by about three dollars from company, community and student contributions. Salaries for students range from $450 to $550 per week.

Mr. Loree started the project after hearing from students how difficult it was to secure meaningful summer employment.

Doreen Knol, manager of engineering career services at McMaster University welcomes the program.

"Many university students have difficulty obtaining relevant work term employment, both in terms of experience and money. This inevitably leads to unsuccessful placement in employment after graduation. With 25 per cent of our students unemployed at graduation in 1994 we welcome this new opportunity," she said.

For more information contact Ms Knol at (905) 525-9140 ext 22571. The program is open to science and engineering students and recent graduates in the Toronto to Hamilton corridor.
