

Mmmm, good!

Well-known chef Joe DiMaggio Jr. (left) was on hand at Brunello Restaurant for its grand opening Monday. The kin of the baseball great, who trained the Main Street restaurant's chefs, was joined by Brunello's owners Michael Morra and Changaz Khan and executive chef Peter Zajac. Here, they present delicious-looking dessert items.

If all goes well, Deidre could be home by mid-July, however she would still have to be watched closely as her body could reject the transplant for up to two years.

Mr. Scholtz said when Deidre isn't feeling ill, she's in good spirits.

"She's never given up on her herself," he said. "To her, she's just sick."

The family has been told nothing about the identity of the bone marrow donor under strict confidentiality regulations in the Unrelated Bone Marrow Registry.

The donor's identity will remain unknown to the family until at least a year after the transplant. At that time, the person's name will be released only if both parties agree.

Last ditch talks on at local hydro

employees and has not replaced several others. Currently the union represents 24 fulltime workers.

"If there is the smallest light at the end of the tunnel we will work towards resolving our problems," said Mr. Reid.

Don Thorne, Milton Hydro general manager, did not want to say anything that might jeopardize the negotiating process, adding only, "Hopefully, we'll be able to resolve any differences."

Mayor Gord Krantz, who sits on the hydro commission, said there are a host of issues and everything is on the table, including benefits and wages.

"Workers have changed union affiliation and I wonder if they fully understand the reality of the 1990s," said Mr. Krantz. He added, however, "I don't want to see a strike or possibly inconvenience a lot of people."

The mayor said the commission laid out contingency operating plans on Monday night which will be used in the event of a strike.

Challenge for youth overseas

Ontario youths aged 18-25, looking for adventure and interested in global development, are invited to apply for a Youth Challenge International project in Costa Rica and Guyana.

Young people from across Canada will work on a variety of community development, health, and environmental projects for 10-week periods next winter, and receive guidance from experienced volunteer leaders and project managers.

Applications for next winter's projects must be in by June 12.

Only 20 positions are available to youth in Ontario.

Applications for volunteer staff aged 26 and up are accepted at any time.

To receive an application, contact Youth Challenge International at (416) 971-9846 ext. 300, or on the internet at <http://www.yci.org>.
