Always expect

According to automotive specialists at General Motors, the best advice that can be given about driving a vehicle is: drive defensively. They define defensive driving as "being ready for anything at anytime, anywhere." Here are some tips they offer:

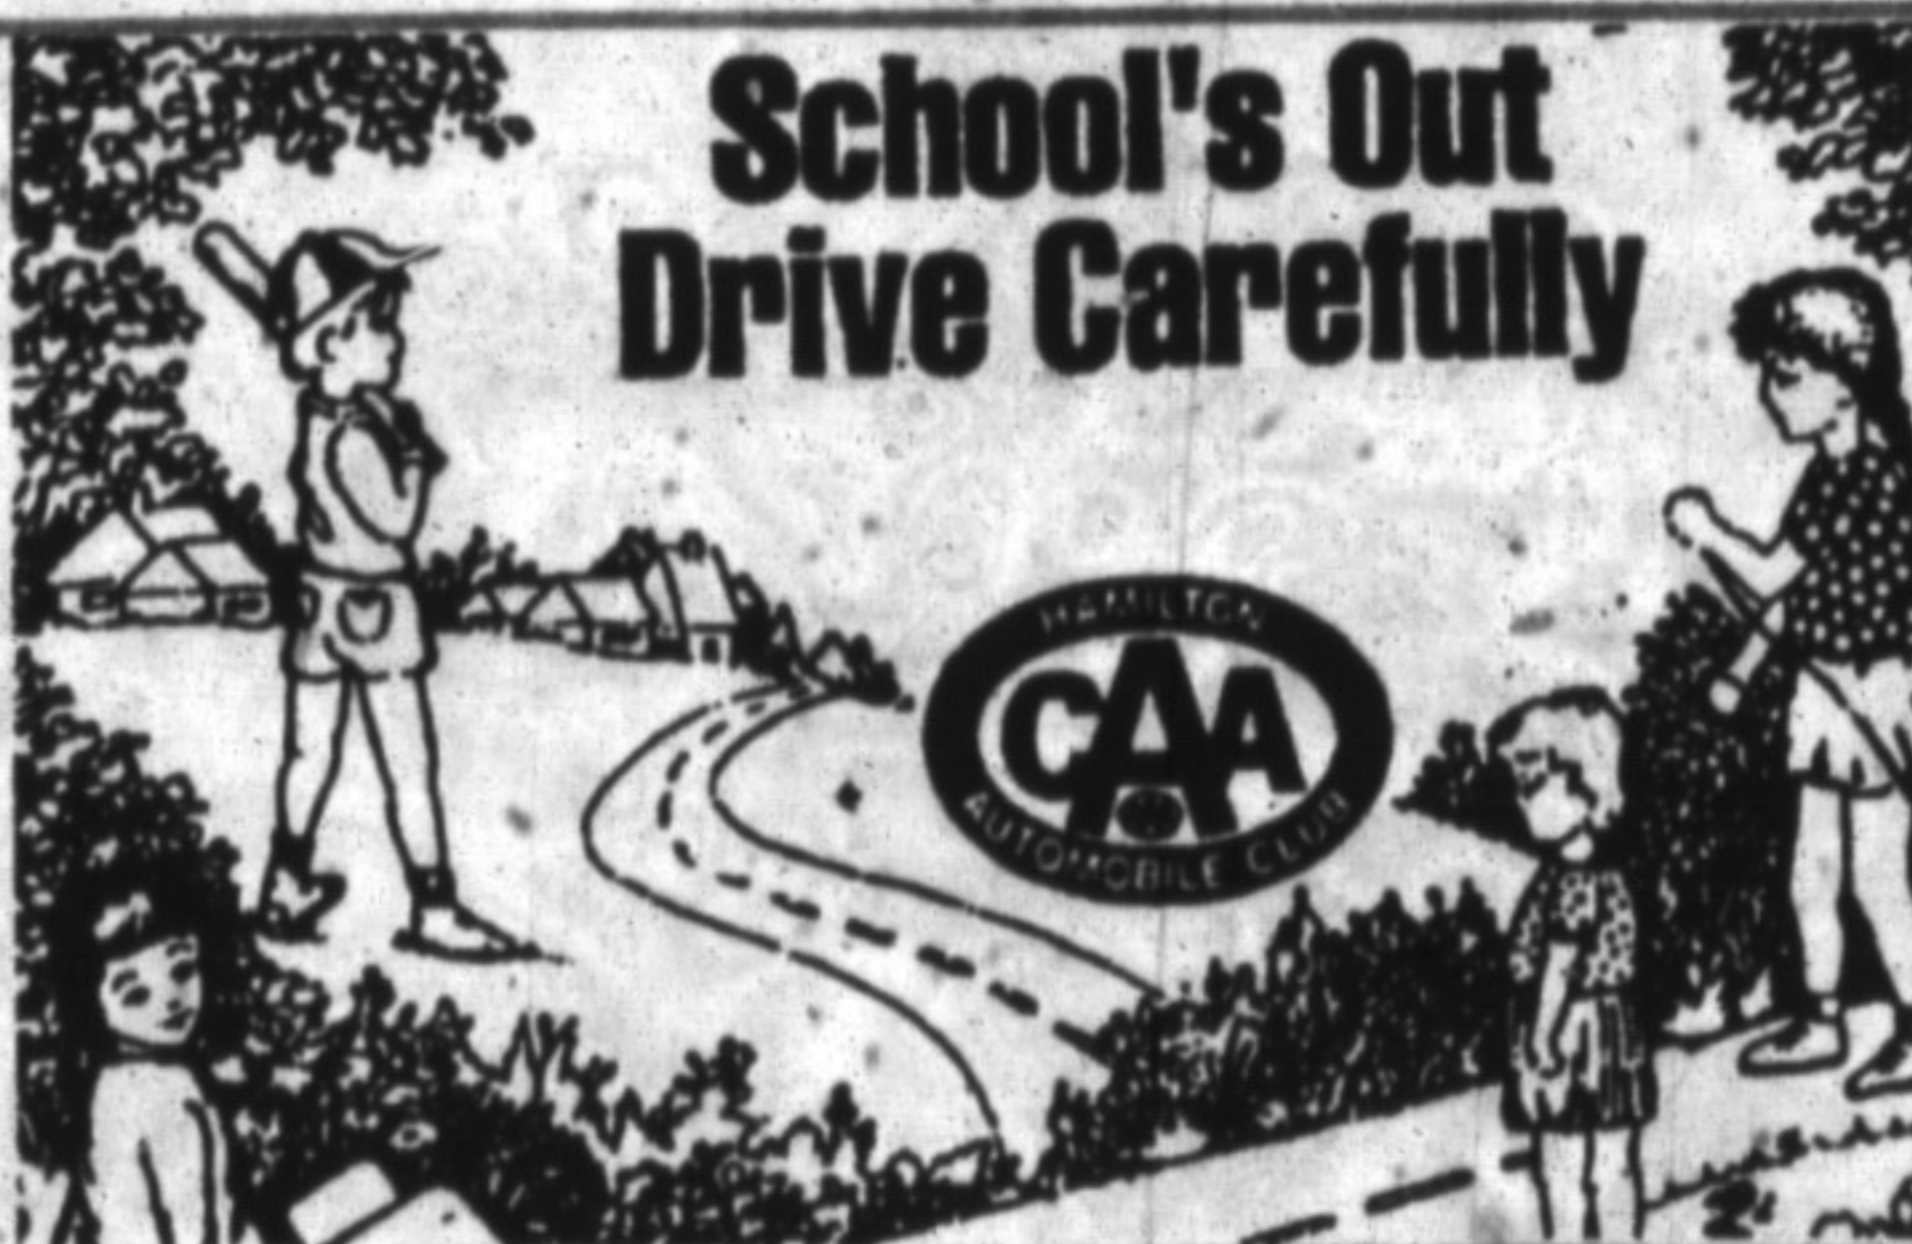

- Always expect the unexpected, whether on city streets or highways. Assume that pedestrians or other drivers may not be paying attention, may be careless or may make some mistakes. Think of what they might do and be prepared to react accordingly.
- Watch for children to dash out from behind parked cars, often followed by other children or pets. Expect occupants in parked cars to open doors into oncoming traffic. Watch for movement in parked cars - someone may be ready to open a door and step out in front of you.
