Most need help in the garden

It's not easy being green. At least, it's not easy having a green thumb. In fact, in a recent survey of 1,000 homeowners conducted by the Canadian Sphagnum Peat Moss Association, more than half of the respondents describe themselves as having a brown thumb, unable to grow little more than the common houseplant.

Sound familiar? The truth is that you don't have to have a green thumb or hours and hours of time to cultivate an attractive, healthy lawn and garden. There are plenty of tips, techniques and technology available to make life around the lawn and garden a lot easier and more fun.

"Most homeowners are discouraged even before they get started," says CSPMA president Gerry Hood, "You need to regard the lawn and garden as a work in progress. A few hours spent here or there will go a long way toward beautifying your yard and adding value to your home."

Devote a few hours each weekend to different areas of the yard. For example, fall is the time to prepare your lawn for the cold winter months ahead. Spend a few hours one weekend top-dressing with sphagnum peat moss, fertilizing and repairing bald spots. Then, devote some time the next weekend to planting bulbs, trees or shrubs that you'll enjoy in the spring.

"Once you've gotten organized," says Hood, "you might even find that you enjoy getting your hands dirty." In fact, you might realize that your thumb is a little greener than you thought.
