Flynn leads NDP

A 29-year-old Oakville man has been nominated to represent the New Democratic Party as its candidate in the Sept. 4 federal election.

Kevin Flynn, married and father of one child, was unopposed at a nomination meeting held Monday evening in the Energy and Chemical Workers Hall in Oakville.

Riding president, Doug Black, prior to Mr. Flynn's nomination, says that he feels the Halton NDP are at an "historic verge" from which he expects they will "topple Otto Jelinek" with one-quarter to one-third the money Mr. Jelinek will spend on the election.

Mr. Flynn said the hallmark of his campaign will be stressing the need for the electorate to choose a man and party who will look after the man in the street.

"The others will be looking after the interests of the bank.

"The NDP will be looking after the interests of people like you and me."

Mr. Flynn said that 22.9 million of the 23 million residents of this country are ordinary people. He said the Liberals and the Progressive Conservatives only are interested in the 100,000 people who have money and power.

Provincial NDP leader, Bob Rae, also attending the nomination said the Sept. 4 election "is about justice."

He said it is his feeling the electorate realizes the NDP is the "party of the people." He said the electorate also realizes it "is not being given a fair shake."

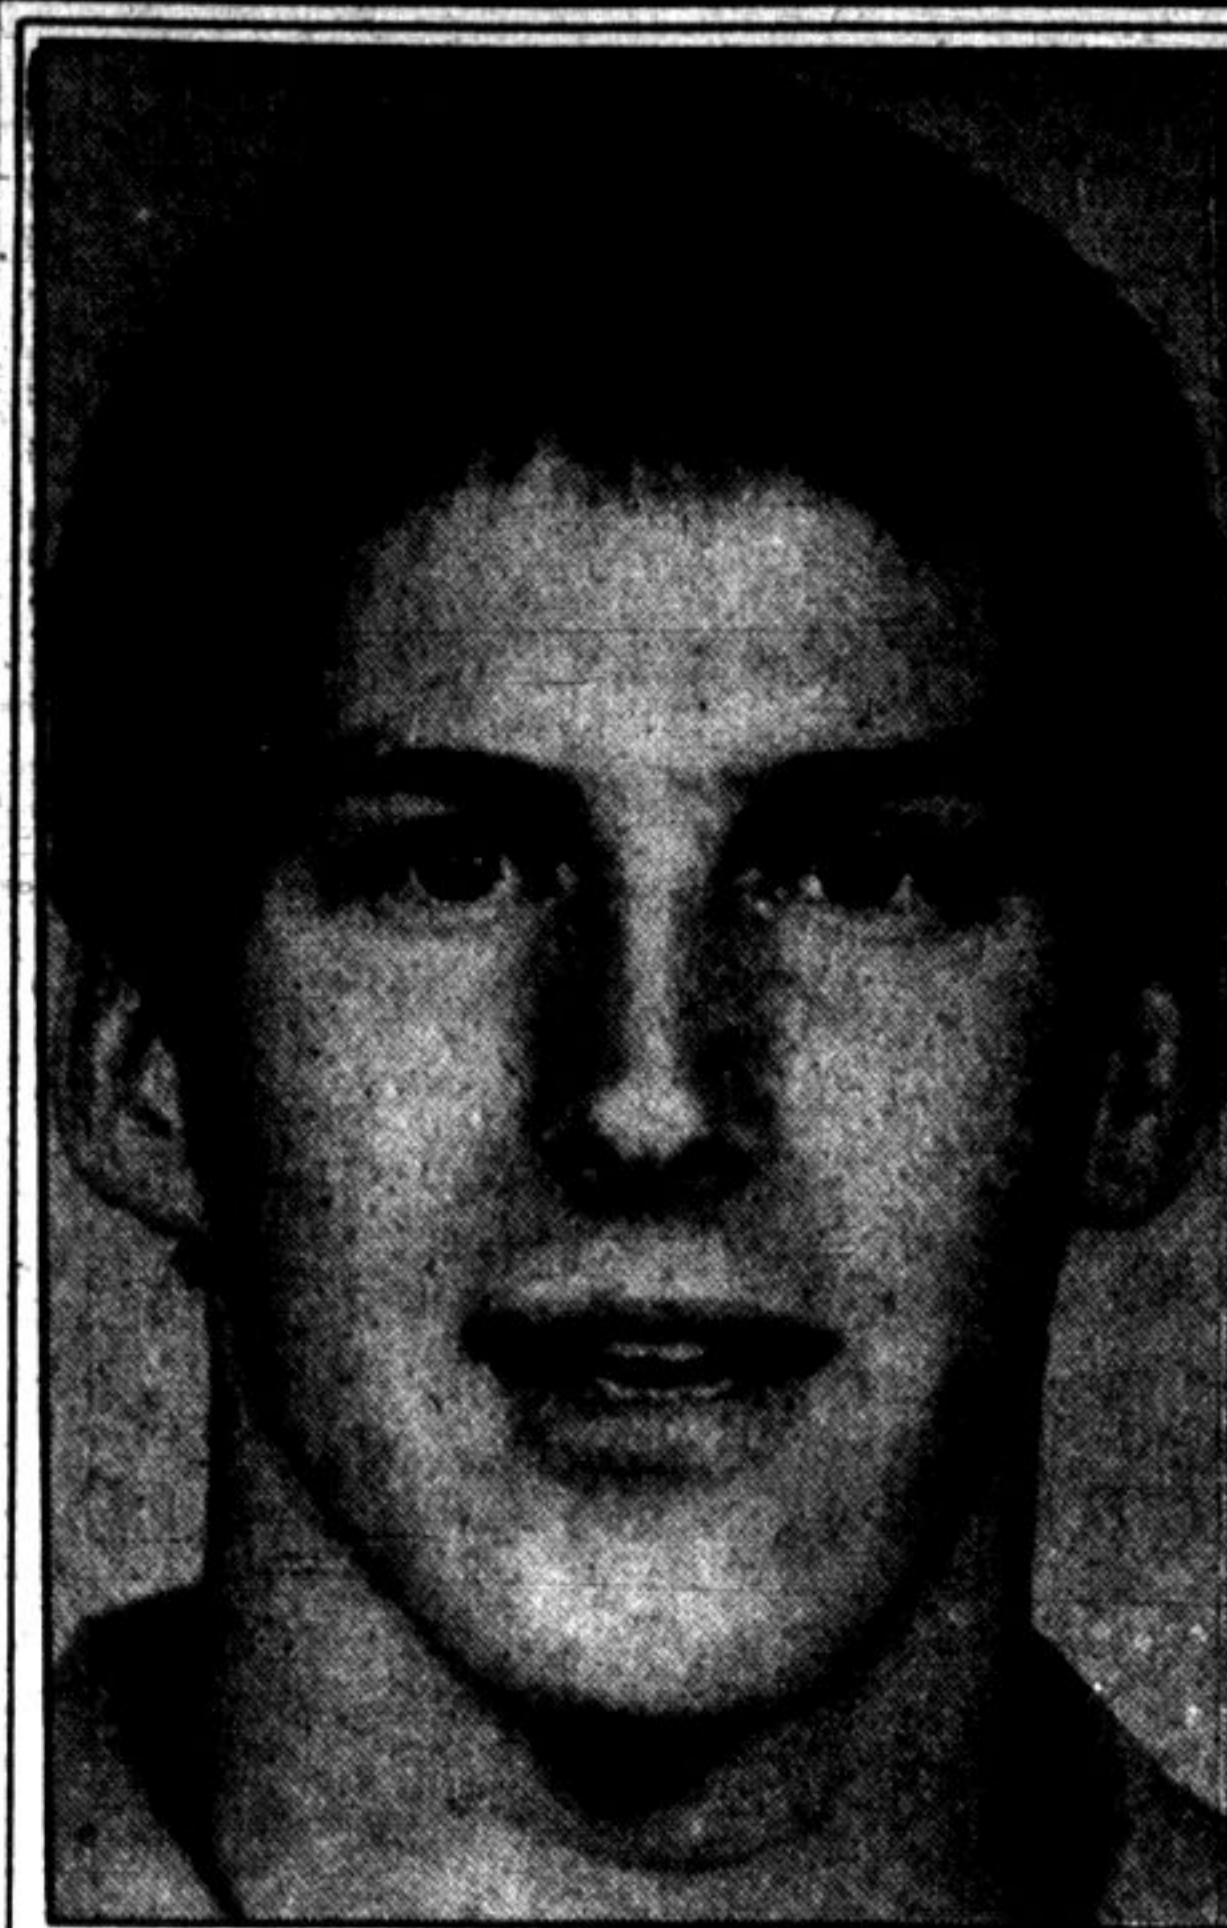

Mr. Flynn is an employee of Mississauga Hydro and a partner in a local small business. He is a volunteer Big Brother and assists in coaching in the Oakville Minor Hockey Association.

He has attended and taken part in many NDP strategy events and though only 29, claims to have been involved in party politics for the past 15 years.

He has served on the Oakville and Halton NDP executives as president, secretary and is currently provincial organizer and federal executive co-ordinator.

Mr. Flynn has said he will be stressing women's issues as a major platform of his campaign.

He told the nomination meeting the issue of "equal pay for work of equal value" will also be stressed in this election.

Chris Kowalchuk.

He's Green

Oakville's Chris Kowalchuk rates his chances at winning the Halton federal riding as better than the three major political parties' aspirations.

"Why not," quips the 22-year-old candidate for the Green Party of Ontario. "Every tree in Oakville will vote for me."

But behind the joke lies a serious demeanor, a will bent on winning an election based on environmental and ecological principles.

Mr. Kowalchuk's party is a major political force in Europe but very small in North America.

The Green Party claims to be outside the conventional left-right political spectrum and un-allied with any vested interest group such as labor, business or bureaucracy.

"That's because we believe in the creation of a society which conforms to ecological realities," explains Mr. Kowalchuk. "It sounds crazy to people at first but believe me, we find they want answers to the problems of acid rain, pollution and nuclear war."
