

New Act, little change

Amendments to the Education Act, which put truancy under the umbrella of the Young Offenders Act, will have little effect on the Halton board of education says a spokesman.

Rae Stoness, superintendent of employee services, said that the board has been operating in the past few years in anticipation of this kind of change.

In the past, if a child refused to attend school, the penalty came from the Eduation Act. Now it may be levied by the court in the form of a contempt of court charge.

The board may initiate proceedings in relation to truancy through the family division of provincial court.

In former years, the parents of a child who refused to attend school could be fined $100 and the child declared a juvenile delinquent under the Juvenile Delinquents Act.

Our Models

15 of our finest homes are now open for viewing

We're showing our finest. This weekend, the builders of River Oaks are presenting a total of 15 model homes. Creditwood Homes, Debonair Developments, Eastcrest Homes, Regal Court Estates and Sheridan Oaks each offer a variety of floor-plan styles, with homes appealing to first, second and third time buyers. Choose from beautiful "semis" priced as low as $71,990, and remarkably generous "space adventure homes" that incorporate up to 2,788 square feet of space (including finished basements) for as little as $99,990. Executive singles on spacious lots, with luxurious design and detail, begin at the $100,000 mark.

Reasonable prices and fine quality in a community planned with care. River Oaks offers an abundance of parkland, complete with forest walking trails. Soon there will be a neighbourhood community centre, shopping centre, medical centre and an elementary school. The shops and boutiques of downtown Oakville are minutes away, while it's only a short drive to Toronto.

Visit the homes of River Oaks this weekend, and admire our models in our model community.
