

A few hours to spare brought Mary King to Halton Centennial Manor. She is a volunteer who will help others like her to get to the home for the aged, as the volunteer van driver. The transportation service began in November.

Free transportation service

Volunteers on wheels

A lack of transportation is no longer a reason for not being a volunteer at Halton Centennial Manor.

A volunteer van complete with a volunteer driver is now available Monday and Friday mornings. The service will become more frequent as demand dictates, according to volunteer coordinator Lorena Smith.

There are six regular passengers who have been using the free transportation service since November. Mrs. Smith said she had been seeking a volunteer driver since September but until Mary King came forward three months ago the position was vacant.

Mrs. King responded to an advertisement as she "had a few hours to spare." A resident of Milton for 25 years, the volunteer has had experience as a professional driver.

She finds the 12-passenger Manor van easy to handle as it is smaller than the 14-passenger van she drives for ARC Industries. She has been transporting adults to and from the Hornby workshop for mentally retarded adults for four years.

The volunteer van was established to attract more volunteers. There are currently 125 volunteers registered with the home for the aged but many more are needed, according to Mrs. Smith.

The van will pick up volunteers in rural areas within a five mile radius of urban Milton.

The volunteer coordinator is helping to organize a car pool for Georgetown residents as several in that area have expressed interest in helping at the Manor.

Anyone requiring transportation in order to become a volunteer should call Mrs. Smith at 878-4141.
