Horse racing transition panel asked to work with the OLG

Draft for long-term plan expected to be complete next month

By Catherine O'Hara
METROLAND WEST MEDIA GROUP

As organizations, including the Ontario Horse Racing Industry Association and the National Capital Region Harness Horse Association, call on Ontario Premier Kathleen Wynne to temporarily halt the Ontario Lottery and Gaming Corporation's modernization strategy until the Auditor General's office has completed its review of the OLG's new policy, the province's leader tasked the Horse Racing Industry Transition Panel to work alongside the Crown agency to implement recommendations it made in its final report.

On Monday the Ministry of Agriculture and Food announced that the transition panel, comprised of former cabinet ministers John Snobelen, John Wilkinson and Elmer Buchanan, has been asked to draft a long-term plan for consultation, due in June.

The trio's work will centre on how to effectively modernize the governance and regulation of the industry, how to grow the consumer base and offer more wagering options, how to provide ongoing government support and ensure animal welfare, all the while meeting public-interest principles.

"I know how important this industry is to communities across Ontario and I am confident that the expertise and guidance of this panel will help the horse racing industry move toward a bright, sustainable future," said the premier and Minister of Agriculture
