Halton Healthcare Services launches redesigned website

Halton Healthcare Services (HHS) has revamped its website www.halton-healthcare.com.

The redesign is meant to be more user-friendlier and provide a more accessible and useful online experience for patients, staff and visitors.

"Our revamped website mirrors the dynamic growth that is taking place at our three Hospitals," said HHS President and CEO John Oliver. "It's been some years since our site was updated. Since then some new, exciting technologies have come along that we wanted to bring to our community."

The website, which is also mobile friendly, is being described by HHS as fresh and clean.

It features a calendar of relevant events, the ability to sign-up for monthly e-newsletters and access to HHS's social media pages, which include Twitter and Facebook.

Users also have access to the Google translation tool, which translates any HTML text on the website in 63 different languages.

HHS officials said there are some limitations to the tool, which are explained on one of the HHS webpages.

The website has the flexibility to expand easily, with features like paying a bill online, patient ecards, RRS feeds, virtual tours, and online videos scheduled to be added soon.

It also plays an integral role as the public face of Halton's three community hospitals in Milton, Oakville and Georgetown and offsite healthcare facilities.

"This launch lays the foundation for ongoing evolution and expansion of the Halton Healthcare Services website with new features and improvements being made continually," said Oliver. "We look forward to feedback from our users and exciting new developments to come."
