HCDSB looks to expedite construction of new Milton schools

Halton Catholic District School Board is ramping up various approvals for two new elementary schools in Milton to try to ensure they open on time for the start of the 2014-15 school year.

The Ministry of Education approved capital funding for the Milton No. 7 and Milton No. 5 kindergarten to Grade 8 schools in January this year while architects for both schools were approved in March.

The Milton No. 5 elementary school will be a two-storey building designed for 671 students. It is on a 2.54-hectare (6.28-acre) site on McLaughlin Avenue, just east of Bronte Street South.

The Milton No. 7 school has the same accommodation specifications and essentially the same design as the No. 5 school. It is on a slightly smaller parcel of land (2.44 hectares) on Savoline Boulevard near Pringle Avenue.

Both schools have an estimated project budget of $12.63 million.

"Both schools are to be completed in parallel, and currently the projects are at approximately the same stage of progress," states a June 4 report to trustees submitted by the board's facilities management department.

Milton No. 7 is about one month ahead of the No. 5 school in terms of various required building and planning approvals.

Milton No. 7 should go out for construction contract tendering in early July with a winning bidder then named followed by building anticipated to begin by late July.

The Milton No. 5 project is expected to go out for tendering in early August with construction to start by the end of August.
