Hard-hitting action

Smash 'em, crash 'em action was in ample supply this past weekend, with the annual Milton Fall Fair featuring three days of demolition derby competition, put on by Thrill Show Productions. At left, Steven Treviranus (#59) gets hammered from behind by fellow Georgetown driver Mike Olliviera in the full size straight stock (FSSS) class Sunday. Town seeks input on urban zoning bylaw

Residents are invited to have their say on the land use of properties within Milton's urban boundaries. The Town of Milton is seeking public input in the preparation of a new zoning bylaw for the urban area. The proposed comprehensive zoning bylaw will replace the current one (Bylaw 144-2003) within urban Milton. Once approved, it will regulate land use on all properties within urban Milton. It identifies different zones and the land uses permitted in each zone. It also contains requirements for building location, size and height as well as parking and landscaped areas. A draft of the new comprehensive zoning bylaw dated August 2013 was released for public comment, and was discussed at a public meeting held in September. "On behalf of town council and staff, I invite and encourage all property owners and tenants in Milton to learn more about the proposed zoning bylaw," said Milton Mayor Gord Krantz. "It is important to understand if and how any changes may affect their property when the by-law comes into effect early in 2014."

Catholic board to seek another trustee position

The Halton Catholic District School Board (HCDSB) has given the green light to establish an ad hoc committee to lobby the provincial government for an additional Milton trustee position. The recommendation was approved by the board at a meeting in Georgetown September 17. The committee is to create a multi-year plan to lobby the government to alter regulations for adding trustees in intensive growth regions such as Milton. Currently Milton has one HCDSB trustee. In May, the board confirmed the status quo of trustee distribution for the 2014 municipal election — four for Oakville, three for Burlington, one for Halton Hills and one for Milton, unless the Province allows an additional trustee.
