Halton police to conduct RIDE checks this weekend

By Julie Slack
 CANADIAN CHAMPION STAFF

Halton police are forewarning those who like to celebrate St. Patrick's Day with a few alcohol-based beverages: they'll be out in force. Sgt. Paul Rudall of Milton's District Response Unit said they'll be out with officers from the Alcohol and Gaming Commission of Ontario (AGCO), Ontario Provincial Police and Mothers Against Drunk Driving on Saturday. During the afternoon, they'll be conducting proactive checks at local LCBO and Beer Stores. They'll also be conducting bar checks and reminding staff of their responsibilities under the Liquor Licensing Act.

"We know, having worked with AGCO, that St. Patrick's Day weekend is well celebrated in North America," said Rudall. "This often means that larger than normal numbers of people attend bars across the region and will no doubt consume alcohol. "Obviously, not everybody who will have a drink will drive. Most will make special arrangements to 'arrive alive,' but others will run the risk of driving when they have consumed alcohol," he said. "I'd like to remind everyone who chooses to drive."
