

Inductees' accomplishments felt locally, nationally, globally: Mowbray

■ Krantz. "It is a privilege for us to be able to honour these Miltonians for their outstanding contributions."

Added Jan Mowbray, president of the Milton Historical Society: "The accomplishments of the 2013 Walk of Fame Inductees have been felt locally, nationally and globally. These individuals have made a difference in their fields and in the world." During the walk of fame induction ceremony, the Milton Patch flown aboard Soyuz spacecraft and the International Space Station with Chris Hadfield along with the Certificate of Authenticity were on display.

The inductees are:

George Cottrelle

George Cottrelle was appointed Oil Controller for Canada by Prime Minister W.L. Mackenzie King, responsible for gas rationing — a job federal minister C.D. Howe described as "the toughest of all jobs during World War II. In no other country was the very difficult task of gasoline rationing handled with such success. His contributions ranked with the finest civilian service."

Cottrell was awarded the Order of the British Empire for his service to Canada during the war. Born and raised in the Township of Esquesing and educated at the Agricultural College in Guelph, Cottrelle began his career as an international industrialist in New York before returning to Canada to serve as an executive with Canadian Bank of Commerce, Union Trust, Ontario Department of Agriculture and Sawyer-Massey, where he served as president. He also served as an executive with Maple Leaf Gardens, helping to finance construction of the building in 1931 and later working with the hockey club. His name was inscribed on the Stanley Cup in 1942.

Edward Dennis Hunter

Edward Dennis Hunter was an international banker and a Canadian-American diplomat, who started his career as a teller with the Bank of Nova Scotia in Campbellville, where he was born and raised. He went on to serve seven decades across three continents with the Canadian bank in executive leadership roles in Greece, Lebanon, Puerto Rico, Santa Domingo and the United States.

He also served as a member of the board of directors of the Bank of Nova Scotia Trust Company of New York.

He led Canadian-American diplomatic relations at a business level through his presidencies of the American Association of New York, the Canadian Society of New York and the Hellenic-American Chamber of Commerce, for which he was awarded Order of Canada and American Medal of Honour recognition. He also served as a member of the board of directors of the Metropolitan Museum.

Edith Rainsford Dick

Edith Rainsford Dick was a national nursing pioneer and government nursing executive. Born and raised in Milton, Dick served in leadership roles with the Government of Ontario's Department of Health for more than 30 years, most notably as director of nursing. Dick is credited for developing psychiatric nursing provincially as well as developing, improving and upholding nursing standards nationally, which led to its becoming a self-regulating profession under the auspices of the Registered Nurses' Association of Ontario (RNAO). She was recognized for her pioneering leadership in nursing by both RNAO and the Canadian Nurses' Association. During the Second World War, she served as a major of two Canadian hospitals in England and France, for which she was awarded the Royal Red Cross First Class Award by King George VI, just one of 132 Canadians to receive this recognition since the award's inception in 1883.

George Newton Hood

George Newton Hood was a provincial government executive and university executive. Toward the end of his career with the Government of Saskatchewan (1981 – 1991), Hood ultimately led the construction of the $200 million Rafferty-Alameda Dam that now protects two Canadian provinces and one U.S. state during times of flood. Between 1985 and 1991, Hood, who was raised in Milton, shepherded the then-controversial infrastructure project. Critics credit the legal process associated with the Rafferty-Alameda dam for the creation of federal environmental law in Canada.

Hood authored an account of the project in 1994, titled Against the Flow, Rafferty-Alameda and the Politics of the Environment. He returned to Ontario to serve as vice-principal of advancement (1998 – 2006) at Queen's University, where he raised more than $312 million in a single year — a record that still stands.

Joseph Martin

The Honourable Joseph Martin was a lawyer, premier of British Columbia, a cabinet minister, and he served governments in Manitoba and England.

Born and raised in Milton, Martin served in the Government of British Columbia from 1898 to 1903, including as premier in 1900; the Government of Manitoba from 1882 to 1892, including as attorney-general and minister of education from 1888 to 1891; the Dominion Parliament for Winnipeg from 1893 to 1896 as a member of parliament; and member of parliament for East St. Pancreas (London) in England from 1910 to 1918.

In Manitoba, he took part in the abolition of French as an official language as well as the end of the separate school system. He advocated for the Torrens' system of land registry.

Halton.ca (311)

Notice of Public Information Centre

Wastewater Main Replacement on Garden Lane and Mill Street, Town of Milton

PR-2970

Halton Region is planning to replace the wastewater main on Garden Lane and Mill Street from Garden Lane to Martin Street beginning summer 2014.

A Public Information Centre will be held for residents who want to learn more about the construction project. Please drop in at any time. Halton staff will be available to answer your questions.

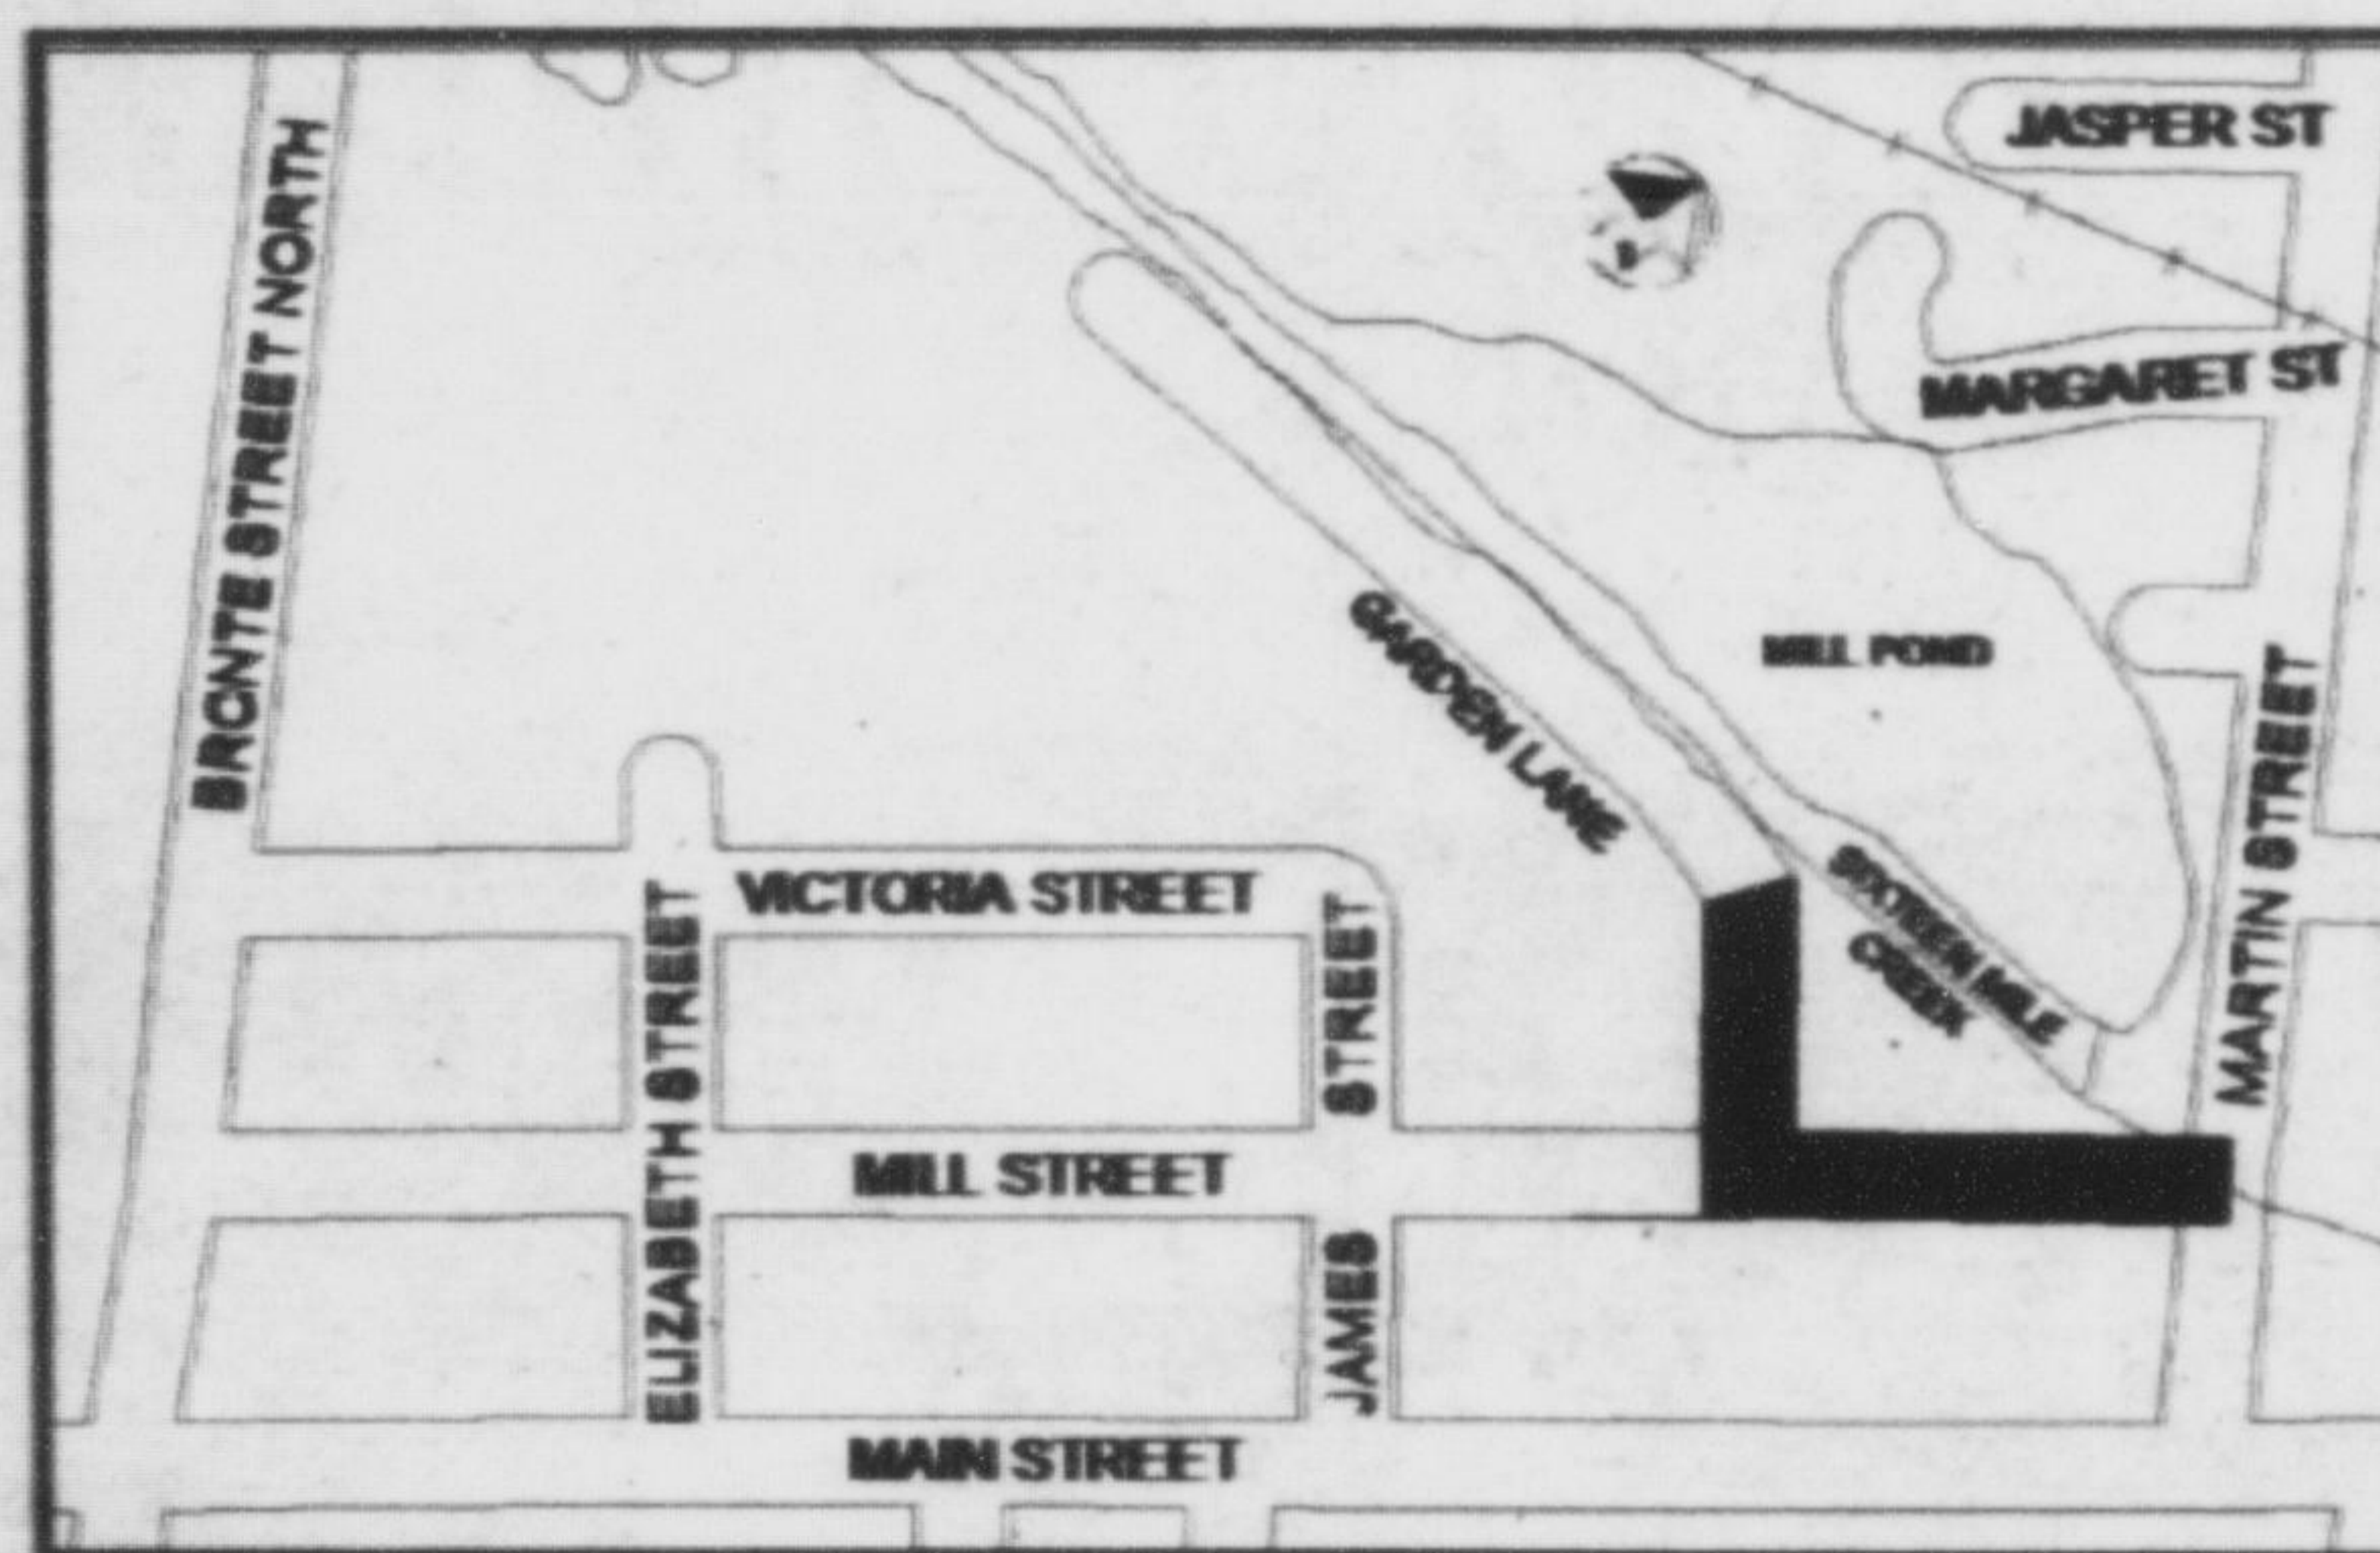

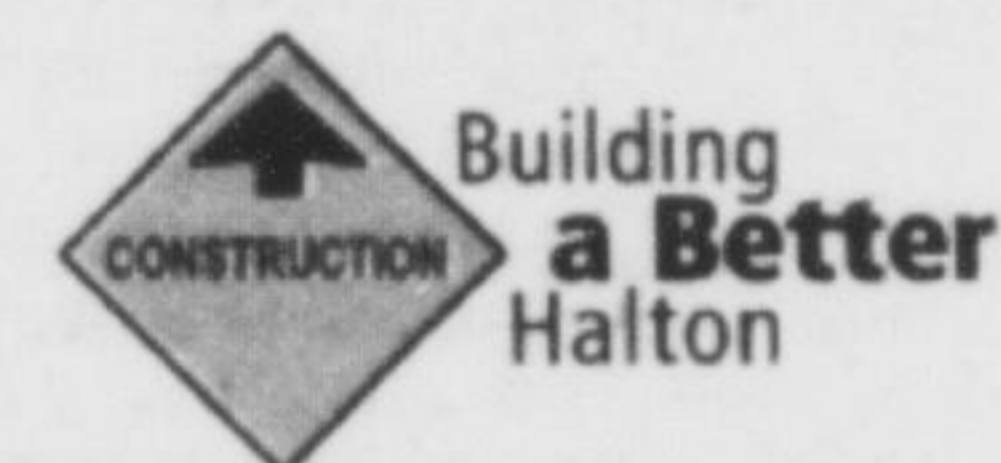

Date: Wednesday, March 26, 2014

Time: 6 – 8 p.m.

Place: St. Paul's United Church
123 Main Street East, Milton

If you would like to learn more about the project and are unable to attend the Public Information Centre, please contact:

Caroline Hales
Project Manager
Public Works
905-825-6000 x 7612
Caroline.Hales@halton.ca

Please contact us as soon as possible if you have any accessibility needs at Halton Region events or meetings.

Savings in the bag.

Save up to $58 on your grocery bill this week.

Visit save.ca
flyers. coupons. deals. savings tips.