Politicians, business community express sadness following death of Flaherty

Local politicians and the business community have expressed their grief and sentiments of respect following the loss of Jim Flaherty, Canada's former finance minister who died last Thursday at age 64.

Halton MP Lisa Raitt said her reaction to the news of Flaherty's passing was one of profound sadness. "For me, Jim was a cherished friend and dear mentor. He was regarded by his colleagues on all sides of the House as an upstanding Parliamentarian who always stood for his convictions. So while Canadians will remember him for his steady leadership on the world's economic stage, I will remember him for his sense of humour, his loyalty and his friendship."
