Craig Kielburger encouraged students at the school named to honour him to do something this school year that makes them so happy they want to dance and sing in the rain.

To a captive audience of more than 1,500 staff and students at Craig Kielburger Secondary School (CKSS) Monday, the Free the Children co-founder and international activist shared a story of how he was encouraged to celebrate in the rain during the construction of a Kenyan school.

He and other members of his non-profit organization, which works with students around the globe to encourage them to be active global citizens, were just finishing the roof a school they had been constructing in Kenya when rains poured down, so heavy, they sought shelter in a nearby villager's
