Red oak planted

33... According to Warren Chandler, senior manager of government affairs for CN, the railway company chops down about 600,000 trees to put rail lines into their network.

"We try to plant as many trees as we use...It's a way to give back to the municipalities and help us get back to that 600,000."

CN is partnered with Tree Canada and Communities in Bloom, two non-profit organizations committed to environmental sustainability initiatives. The three chose Milton as a grant recipient for the progress it had already made with the Jaycee Trail, which included tree removal, tree planting, shrub maintenance and habitat preservation.

A red oak tree was planted to mark phase 3 of the project, along with the unveiling of a sign commending Milton for its municipal greening program.

"Mother Nature is sometimes brutal...It's nice to see some of the new plantings around here, just to regenerate the area," said Krantz.

The grant money will be used for future forest management, trail improvements and regeneration planting in Livingston Park.

The EcoConnexions "From the Ground Up" program started in 2012 and has helped 85 communities throughout Canada.
