Traffic detour caused after escaped cattle found walking along Bronte St.

A herd of cattle that escaped from a farm near Bronte Street, south of Louis St. Laurent on Tuesday have been returned home. Halton police blocked off intersections in the area while police try to locate the herd's owner after some 20 cows were reported walking up the busy road at 2:45 p.m., north of Britannia Road.

It took police several hours to keep the bovine off the road. Even when they thought they had been safely relocated into neighbouring fields the cows began reappearing on the road.

Police said there were no reports of injuries. Yesterday (Wednesday) morning on their Twitter feed, police quipped that, 'North Halton roads are collision and bovine free at this time.'
