What's new on the home décor front this fall

"The market is overflowing with new and exciting introductions," says Sally Morse, director of creative services for Hunter Douglas, a leading name in Canadian window fashions. "The new designs are enough to make a big difference both in your home's look and mood without requiring a major overhaul." Here are some of her favorite ways to update any home:

Très Glam Touches

A highly original wallcovering, light fixtures, or a gamut of accessories – a few glamorous touches go a long way. Try papering the foyer in a textured metallic material or add a shimmering glow to the den with linear LED lights hidden within the ceiling cove.

Updated Classics

Hunter Douglas Pirouette window shadings are reminiscent of classically hobbled Roman shades, but feature an innovative design of soft, horizontal fabric vanes attached to a single sheer backing. The vanes open and close for variable light control and reduced glare.

New Alustra Pirouette shadings enhance these qualities with a luscious new fabric, Charmeuse, which has the essence of raw silk with a refined texture in eight colours. A tinted back sheer is standard for a colour-coordinated look.

They can be motorized and operated with the Hunter Douglas Platinum App and integrated into home automation systems. Fashion-forward and so easy to manage.

Safety and Style

Hunter Douglas offers the widest variety of product operating systems that eliminate or substantially reduce access to lift cords. The designs are well-suited for homes with young children. With the LiteRise cordless lifting system simply use your fingers to raise or lower the window treatment. Even better, it's now offered on the company's roller shades.

Gold and Brass Touches

Try table lamps with brass or gold-leafed bases or a wood desk with brass-plated legs. Finish with the bronzed gold Charmeuse featured in the new Alustra Pirouette shadings.

"Search out the new introductions in the world of interiors even if you haven't anything specific in mind," counsels Morse. "One small purchase could mean a stunning change in your home, and in your lifestyle."
