If you think you may have measles, call ahead to the doctor's office, public clinic

8cer of Health Dr. Monir Taha. In 2014, one measles case was reported; down from the four reported the year prior.

The Region was also made aware last year of a Peel resident, who contracted measles and visited healthcare facilities in Halton.

If you think you may have measles and need to see a doctor, you must call ahead to the doctor's office, walk-in clinic or public health clinic. This will allow health care staff to prepare for your visit, give you a mask to wear when you arrive and take you straight to a room in which you can be isolated to reduce the risk of exposure to others.

Since measles is now circulating in southwestern Ontario and easily spreads from person to person, the health department is urging all residents to have their vaccination up to date.

Adults born before 1970 are generally presumed to have acquired natural immunity to measles, however, some of these individuals may be susceptible.

All Ontarians, regardless of date of birth, are eligible for two doses of MMR vaccine.

For individuals born in 1970 or after, two doses of the MMR vaccination are required to be considered adequately protected.

According to the media release, the health department works throughout the year to plan for various potential disease outbreaks, while helping people learn how to protect themselves from the threat of an outbreak and working with the medical community to ensure Halton is prepared to meet the changing needs of our community.

For more information, dial 311 or call the health department at (905) 825-6000 or toll free 1-866-442-5866, or visit Halton.ca/measles.
