

Chris Hadfield's book dedicated to memory of Anne J. MacArthur

It's named after Anne J. MacArthur, who was an educator in Milton for most of her life. In her later years, she was a councillor, then mayor and a passionate and vocal leader who became a founding member of the Niagara Escarpment Commission. She was a mentor to many students and colleagues. "What we have here is incredible and vibrant," she said. "The support from the board, the construction company and the Milton community has been awe-inspiring."

In front of a gymnasium of students, parents, teachers, board staff, school Trustee Kim Graves and the Milton Historical Society's Jan Mowbray, she dedicated Chris Hadfield's book You Are Here, Around the World in 92 Minutes, to the memory of Anne J. MacArthur, which will be placed in the school library. Students sang, danced and the band played several pieces to celebrate the opening. Student MCs Sarah Newman and Hasan Khan said they were thrilled to have the important task of announcing the various guests. Sarah said she's proud to attend the new school and excited to have the opportunity to graduate from the school in June. Hasan echoed her words, adding "I'm honoured to do this at the opening ceremonies."

It's a big thing to be a part of." Sarah added, "Being here for over a year is pretty amazing." Julie Slack can be reached at jslack@miltoncanadianchampion.com or on Twitter @miltonmusing.
