Premier won't get involved in teachers' contract talks

By Tim Whitnell METROLAND WEST MEDIA GROUP

Kathleen Wynne said she has no plans to immerse herself in the current contract talks between the Province and high school teachers at some Ontario school boards, including Halton public.

"We're going to let that process unfold without any interference from me in the media. It's not helpful," the Ontatio premier said in an interview Friday at Rattlsenake Point Golf Club. The three area Liberal MPPs, Eleanor McMahon of Burlington, Kevin Flynn of Oakville and Indira Naidoo-Harris of the Halton riding, also sat in on the interview.

Wynne had addressed members of three area chambers of commerce earlier that afternoon. While at the time of the interview with Wynne, representatives of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation (OSSTF) had walked away from contract talks at the central (provincial) bargaining table, they had indicated they would be resuming the talks.

However, the Durham public school board's high school teachers had left local contract
