Town cuts down 100 trees on farm by mistake

By Riannon Westall and Holly Honderich

A Milton farm owner is seeking answers from the town of Milton after 100 trees on her property were cut down by mistake.

"(The town's operations department) went onto my field, onto the private property, cut down a lot of the grass, a lot of the clover that I have growing for my bees and 100 trees," said Karin Tomosky-Chambers, who owns a 10-hectare farm next to the town of Milton Civic Operations Centre, located on Regional Road 25, south of Louis St. Laurent.

Tomosky-Chambers is confused how her property was mistaken as municipal property because, in certain areas, a chain-link fence divides the two lands.

After noticing the cut trees while planting new trees, she called the town of Milton.

Jim Cartwright, operations manager for the town of Milton, said a student in that department made the mistake. The student was trimming grass along the property line of the Milton Civic Operations Centre.
