

Milton means business

The Town of Milton has been named Canada's Best Place for Business, according to ProfitGuide.com.

The Canadian Business "Best Places for Business" relies on a mix of data from municipal governments and independent demographic and market data.

Several criteria where Milton rated highly were market indicators such as population growth, median household income and percentage of residents with a university degree; governmental indicators such as building permit processing time and business property tax rate; and cost indicators such as average home price, average office and commercial lease rates.

"On behalf of Milton Council, we are proud to be named Canada's Best Place for Business, and if I may be so bold, this title comes as little surprise to us," said Mayor Gord Krantz. "There are a number of factors that make Milton such a great place to do business — from a well-educated, well-earning population to a local government that works closely with businesses to help their business thrive in Milton."

"The Town is headed for a record year for non-residential growth, which speaks to the success Milton has had at attracting new businesses and supporting existing ones with their expansion plans."
