

STEM club holds closing ceremony

Students wrap up work on solar system

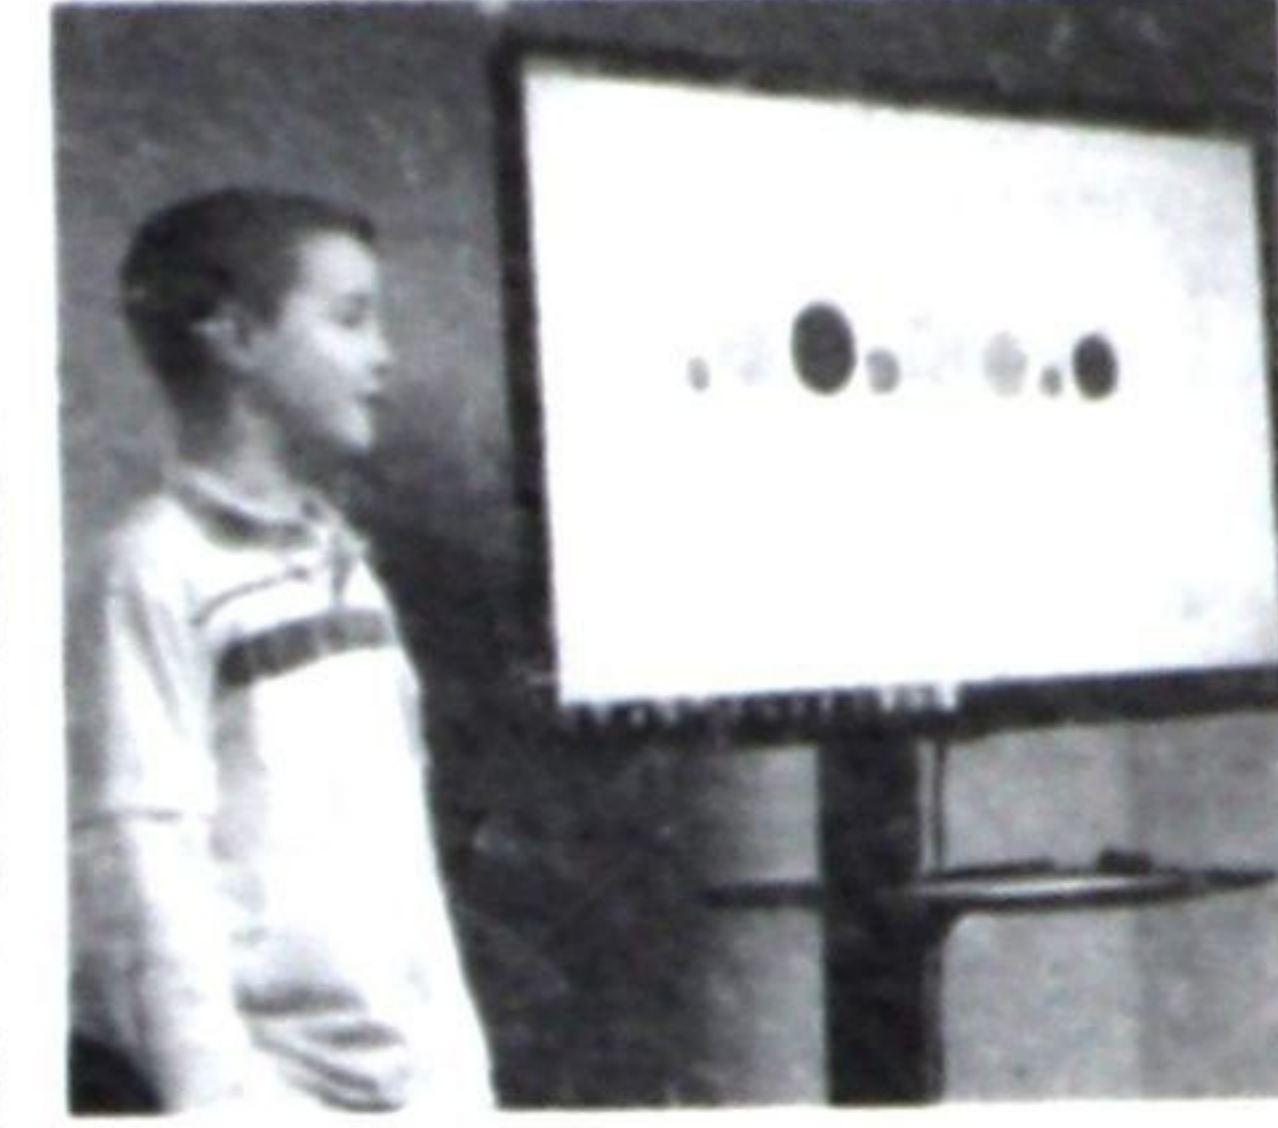

Several students recently celebrated the closing of the STEM (Science-Technology-Engineering-Mathematics) club November/December session at Robo-Geek. The new business holds workshops and clubs for students at the Milton Education Village Innovation Centre on Industrial Drive. It aims to support students with problem solving and encourages research on science, technology, engineering and mathematics.

The group's latest subject focused on space exploration and the solar system. Students were tasked with researching the subject and preparing presentations with Ipython, a new and interactive language used by the scientific community to write their findings.

omy and Astrophysics at the University of Toronto was on hand at the club's closing ceremony, where she provided youth with positive feedback on their work. Robo-Geek was founded by engineers who want to foster confidence and an 'I can do it' attitude in youth. Engineers make up the staff, who enjoy teaching young minds the wonders of programming, electronics and robotics. It offers courses to students from grades 1-12. Programs include hands-on work with computers, electronic boards, robots and labs. For details or more information go to www.robogeek.ca/about-us.html.
