Another sex-related charge levelled against paramedic

A Halton paramedic, facing sex-related charges laid by police in July and April, is now facing another charge. On Monday (Aug. 15), Halton police reported charges were laid as a result of an investigation of a complaint made after an adult female victim contacted them regarding an historical incident allegedly perpetrated by a male known to her.

The incident was not in relation to the accused's duties as a paramedic. The accused faces charges of sexual assault and voyeurism, laid last month, involving an alleged sexual assault against a female patient inside an ambulance in October 2015.

The same suspect also faces two counts of possession of child pornography, laid in April, following an Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) child online exploitation investigation, which resulted in the arrest of 80 people. Following his arrest in the spring, Halton Region placed the accused on unpaid leave and said it would be carrying out an internal investigation, which is ongoing. Tad Nelson, 57, of Dundas was to appear for a bail hearing in Milton on charges of sexual assault and sexual exploitation.

Anyone with information is asked to contact Det. Const. Matt Cunnington at 905-465-8978 or Det. Const. Alanja Prescod at 905-465-8997.
