

changing world, we need to ensure that we are there with excellent facilities and strong school library programs. The most important thing you can do right now is start collecting site-based evidence of the impact you make in your school.

- Take the existing research findings and translate them into action.
- Reflect on what you are doing now in view of the research findings.
- Rethink, rework, redesign.
- Collect tangible evidence in your school.
- Consider gathering evidence from three perspectives - learner, learning unit, and learning environment

- Create reports, advertise and celebrate your success.
- Tell the world how your school library program makes a difference.
- Use your evidence to advocate for more support.

FIVE ACTIONS THAT MAKE A DIFFERENCE

Use the chart below by Keith Curry Lance and David Loertscher to help you get started with your action plan. □

5 KEY THINGS TO DO EVERY DAY TO MAKE A DIFFERENCE

Keith Curry Lance and David Loertscher, 2003

Strategy based on research	Action	Evidence of Success
Collaborate with teachers to build solid learning experiences
Teach integrated information literacy
Motivate learners to read more
Push information beyond the library into the classroom and into the homework on the leadership agenda
Work on the leadership agenda		